A Very Great Woman

I want to do this about a woman I will never forget—a very brave and wonderful person. She is about 60, I'd guess. She is a large woman, whose strong body reflects years of toil and the bearing of many burdens. Her face is Slavic and is beautiful, as sculptors see faces which are alive and reflective of fires and dreams within.

She is visiting in America now—in the interest of Israel's bond issue. She is Minister of Labor in the new Jewish state, and the story of her journey there is one which has made her a legend. She is Golda Meyerson.

Her first memory is one of fear. When she was about three and a half years old, she recalls how her parents piled furniture against the door of their small house in Kiev, Russia. There were etched on her young mind the long shadows cast by candles, hushed voices and the feeling of fear. She didn't know what they meant by talk of a pogrom, but she learned fear as a first memory.

America

Later on her parents managed to get away and come to America. She was an immigrant child in Milwaukee. There she went to grade school and to college. She taught school for a while. She worked in the library. But always in her mind was the memory of those who could not get away from Kiev . . . and from other places in the world because there was no homeland for them.

This thing nagged at her until, in 1921, she went to Palestine. She went to a farm settlement. She worked in the fields and the barns. She plowed with oxen. She spread manure on the fields. She built stone fences. It was primitive and lacking in comfort. There were no showers or bathtubs. There was a tin tub in the kitchen for baths.

Today, she is a member of the government which rules the country her dream, her sweat, muscles and mind helped create.

In the last days of the British mandate in Palestine, with bitter guerilla warfare raging, she volunteered to go on a peace mission to Abdullah, King of Transjordan. A few weeks before she had suffered a heart attack and was still not strong or well. Doctors advised against a journey so hazardous.

She went. The story has never been told officially. But enough of it is known to tell it. All Israel was afraid for her. The Arab agreement to receive an emissary was definite, but there could be many slips, and betrayal was not impossible.

Journey

A brave man, fluent in Arabic, went with her as an interpreter. She crossed the lines in a car. She was disguised as an Arab woman, and her interpreter wore a similar disguise. They passed through a number of Arab communities, any one of which would have murdered the two representatives had they discovered their identities.

Golda Meyerson has never told the story, but reports have it the king, who has never been as unreasonable in his attitude as have rulers of other Arab countries, was courteous and attentive. Mrs. Meyerson appealed for friendly relations, and said that if war came it would be bitter and hard-fought. Abdullah reportedly lamented the fact it was too late for peace. And he was bound by treaty to his Arab "brothers." The mission was a failure.

War came and the Arab Legion from Transjordan carried the brunt of it for the Arab cause. But, it was not enough and the nation of Israel was born of the fighting.

In politics she has been in the thick of the rough and tumble fighting. She takes part in the campaigns, speaking to the partisan crowds and more than holding her own in the heckling that features them. Israel has a number of political parties and her difficulties are made the more harsh by the orthodox bloc which wishes to retain many of the features of a medieval state in this, the 20th Century. The more extremes have a fanaticism which would be willing to tear down the state, though to do so would destroy all. Politics in Israel are a tempestuous sea and those who ride it have to be skilled in the art of surfboards. She is. One of the political groups is soft toward communism. She has helped keep it off balance. The Communist Party in Israel is impotent because it must take, paradoxically, an anti-Semitic line against immigration to Israel. Golda Meyerson does a big job in behalf of common sense in her country's politics.

These are but a few illustrations from the life of a great woman, now in America, whose first memory was of fear, but whose whole life since has been one of achievement, distinction and scorn of fear.

Phone Union Set to Take Strike Vote

10 Percent Hike Demanded of Bell

More than 30,000 union telephone workers in nine Southeastern States who are seeking a 10 percent wage hike will vote this week whether or not to strike against Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company, W. A. Smallwood, CWA-CIO leader, announced in Atlanta Sunday.

Key issue involved in negotiations between the union and the company—which have been going on for four weeks—is a wage hike that would grant union workers the maximum allowable under stabilization regulations.

The union's position, Smallwood said, is that every employee is entitled to the full 10 percent, "weighted so as to maintain the historical and contractural relationships between wage schedules and towns."

A Bell spokesman, meanwhile, expressed surprise at the union's action and said its members were seeking increases in excess of those allowed by the government.

"Bargaining has not been broken off," Smallwood said. "We are recessed for the weekend and negotiations will be resumed Monday or Tuesday at the latest. The union is still hopeful that agreement can be reached at the bargaining table, and every effort is being made on our part to do so."

Contract now in effect expires at midnight next Monday.

Southern Bell on May 8 offered a $10,000,000 annual wage hike.

Joint Chiefs Chafe Under Procedures

By AUSTIN STEVENS
New York Times News Service
Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, May 27—The Joint Chiefs of Staff, the nation's highest strategic military planning body, are becoming increasingly dissatisfied with the way in which their views on vital defense decisions are transmitted to President Truman and other high government authority.

This became known Sunday as some defense sources indicated that while general harmony prevails within the Joint Chiefs group itself and the group's chairman, Gen Bradley is painstakingly impartial, practice of the national security or "unification" act has shown flaws which might be remedied.

At the very worst, some admittedly slender straws in the wind would mean there was actual dissension within the ranks of the four-man Joint Chiefs body. More likely it was indicated that while Congress had designed in the unification act which it thought to be a balanced law that would give equal voice to the Army, Navy and Air Force the law in operation is working somewhat differently than intended.

At the heart of the matter, it appears, is that the Joint Chiefs and even the secretaries of the three services are somewhat rankled at their remoteness from the highest government seats of council.

The subject bubbled into public view in a quiet manner this past week when Adm. Forrest P Sherman chief of naval operations, described the Joint Chiefs of Staff structure an "overly large body for efficient procedure and prompt action."

He also mentioned, in testimony before the House armed services committee, there was an "increasing tendency" to have the advice and recommendations of the three chiefs of the armed services passed on to higher authority by others.

The Joint Chiefs body is made up of Gen. J. Lawton Collins, chief of staff of the Army; Gen. Hoyt S. Vandenberg, chief of staff of the Air Force, and Adm. Sherman. Gen. Bradley is chairman of

2 Georgians Drown in Boat Upsets

An Atlanta man—father of four young children—and a Columbus telephone man were drowned Sunday in similar boating mishaps on Allatoona Lake and Lake Chatuge.

They were identified as William Haynes Mitchell, 35, of 3027 N. Druid Hills Rd., N. E., Atlanta, and Sumter Boatwright, 38, of a Mulberry Drive, Columbus, address.

Both were drowned when their boats capsized.

The State Patrol at Cartersville said Mitchell drowned when the boat in which he and five others were fishing turned over about 3 p. m. on Allatoona approximately one-half mile from Whittaker's Landing.

FIVE RESCUED

Ralph Edwards, of 858 W. Marietta St., N. W., Atlanta, and his son, Jimmy, from Rome, who said they were about 300 yards away when the boat turned over, rescued the other five occupants but said there "was too much commotion" to get to Mitchell before he sank. His body was recovered at 8 p. m. and taken to Owen's Funeral Home in Cartersville.

Edwards said others in the boat with Mitchell included Van Vaughn, George Vaughn, George Vaughn, Jr., Elbert Rollins and Hubert Rollins, all of Atlanta.

Mr. Mitchell, an employee of Milton-Bradley Co., is survived by his wife; young twin daughters, Velma and Thelma; a son, William, four; and an infant son.

ROUGH WATER

Boatwright was drowned when the boat in which he and his brother were occupants on Lake Chatuge capsized in rough water.

The brother, Wallace, swam ashore. Persons fishing from the banks of the lake saw the boat when it capsized following a sudden turn, and spread an alarm. Boatwright's body was not recovered for several hours.

Sheriff Ed Barnard of Towns County directed the search for the body.

An employee of Southern Bell Telephone and Telegraph Company Mr. Boatwright had lived in Columbus only a short time. Previously he lived in Macon.

Socialist Wins Presidency Of Austria

VIENNA, May 27—Gen. Theodore Koerner, Socialist Mayor of Vienna, was elected President of Austria Sunday with a four percent majority over his Peoples Party rival, Dr. Heinrich Gleissner, Governor of Upper Austria. This was Austria's second try at electing a president in three weeks and the result was a surprise to the prophets and a shock to the Conservative Peoples Party.

Gen. Koerner

Koerner, 78, who had polled one percent less of the total vote than Gleissner in the first presidential election attempt on May 6, apparently owed his success this time to the unusual combination of Rightist and Communist support. The election of May 6, in which six candidates participated, was a failure because none received more than 50 percent of the total which, under Austrian law, necessitated the runoff Sunday between the two leaders of the previous poll. In the interim the Communist Party directed its supporters to vote for Koerner, and the Peoples Party campaign managers made use of this to proclaim "a vote for Koerner is a vote for a peoples democracy."

They apparently hoped with this slogan to capture a majority of the 660,000 votes which had been cast in the first election attempt for Dr. Burghard Breitner, who ran as an independent but with support from the Nazi-tinged Independent Party, as well as from elements dissatisfied with

Red China Takes Over Tibet Rule

Treaty Provides Provincial Status

By HENRY R. LIEBERMAN
New York Times News Service

HONG KONG, May 27—The Chinese Communists announced Sunday night they had achieved the "peaceful liberation" of Tibet through a political settlement that plants the five-starred Red flag of the Chinese People's Republic on the "roof of the world" overlooking India and Pakistan.

According to the Peiping radio, Tibetan authorities have finally agreed to end resistance and incorporate the theocratic Tibetan state into the structure of Communist China. This completes the Communists' conquest of the Chinese territorial unit still outside of Formosa the only major Chinese territorial unit still outside their hands.

Tibet, with a population of 3,000,000 or more, was brought under Chinese Communist control in a 17-point agreement signed in Peiping on May 23. Representatives of three Tibetan camps were brought to Peiping late last month to negotiate the settlement.

These included the Dalai Lama's group at Lhasa, the rival Chinese-sponsored clique of the Panchen Lama at Kumbum Lamasery in Tsinghai province and the Communist-sponsored people's government for the autonomous Tibetan area, which was established at Kating in Sikang province last November. Although the Tibetan people were assured the right to rule themselves under the national government's leadership, the Lhasa regime relinquished its power under the provisions of the agreement specifying that Tibet must:

PROVISIONS OF TREATY

1. Unite with Communist China to oust "imperialist influence."

2. Permit the "people's liberation army" to enter to "strengthen national defense."

3. Yield control over its foreign relations to the central government.

4. Make its own troops available for gradual reorganization and absorption by the "people's liberation army."

5. Allow the central government to establish a military command and a political and military affairs commission in Tibet to supplement the settlement.

PIEPING'S PROMISES

On the other hand, the Peiping regime promised to preserve Tibet's political institutions, maintain the present position of the young Dalai Lama, protect religious freedom, refrain from altering receipts of the temples, undertake a development program and permit the local rather than the central government to carry out "reforms." It promised further to let the old officials carry on provided they severed "pro-imperialist and pro-Kuomintang" ties and refrained from "sabotage and counterrevolution."

At the same time, it called for a return to Tibet of the Panchen Lama, who had been living under Chinese protection at the Kumbum Lamasery in northwest China. The reincarnate form of the Panchen Lama has been absent from Tibet since the early 1920s as a consequence of a long-standing feud between the rival Lama cliques. The present incumbent, a boy of about 14, has never been in Tibet.

The Dalai Lama often has been represented as the temporal and the Panchen Lama as the spiritual ruler of the Tibetans. But the theoretical line of division has been obliterated by the power struggle of the Lama cliques clustered around them.

Foe Has Lost Will to Fight, 8th Is Told

By PHIL NEWSOM

TOKYO, May 28—(UP)—Chinese Communist troops began surrendering in "wholesale numbers" Monday for the first time since they entered the Korean war.

"The enemy has lost the will to fight," an Eighth Army spokesman said. "Trapped units and scattered elements are surrendering in wholesale lots after throwing away their weapons."

At one spot on the west central front northwest of Chunchon, 2,000 hungry, beaten Chinese Reds dropped their guns and surrendered. It was the biggest bag of enemy prisoners since the Allies destroyed the old North Korean army in the Pyongyang sector last October.

The huge group of prisoners surrendered after they were told by their comrades that they were surrounded. American troops fed "C" rations to the first few prisoners who came in and sent them back to inform the remainder that they had no chance of escape.

ESCAPE BLOCKED

Meanwhile, strong United Nations task forces were thrown across all the major escape routes into North Korea as the Eighth Army closed a giant "nutcracker" trap on an estimated 60,000 to 100,000 fleeing Communists.

One American division ran into stiff resistance from some 500 Chinese troops south of the 38th Parallel early Monday morning. There were no details, but the general headquarters communique said enemy resistance on Sunday had "generally decreased."

Allied troops captured the two key highway towns of Hwachon and Inje in a lightning offensive which cut off the Communists' main escape routes. Hwachon is eight miles north of the 38th Parallel and Inje is four miles inside North Korea.

The shattered Communist armies fled in wild disorder as UN fighter-bombers swarmed over the frontline areas, destroying the Communists and their equipment.

Germans Hail 4th Division, Landing to Redress Balance

By DREW MIDDLETON
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

BREMERHAVEN, May 27—Troops of the Fourth Infantry Division of the United States Army landed here Sunday, called from the New World once again to redress the military balance of the Old.

The soldiers, who streamed down the gangplank in a pouring rain, were the vanguard of the first American divisional reinforcements since the end of World War II, and they received the sort of welcome usually accorded to conquering heroes.

Their job, they were told by their Army commander, Lt. Gen. Manton S. Eddy of the Seventh Army, is "to be prepared if war should break out."

This means, he said, the Division must be maintained—as are other American troops in Germany—in "a constant state of readiness for combat."

Gen. Alphonse Juin, commander in chief designate of Allied forces in Central Europe who will lead American, British and French divisions defending the continent in event of Soviet aggression, also was at the quayside to welcome the troops and to tell them the West would never buy peace at the price of slavery.

"You are with us," Gen. Juin told the 1,100 troops standing on the quay in the rain, "in your place in the advance guard of the free world. Your arrival is a further proof of the will of your great country to defend Western civilization."

The arrival of American reinforcements in Germany threatens no one, Gen. Juin declared. But it strengthens, he said, the hope of

Matron, Boy Found Slain On Beach

GULFPORT, Miss., May 27—(AP)—The brutally beaten bodies of an expectant mother and a small boy were found on the Gulf of Mexico beach Sunday.

Sheriff Laze Quave said the woman, an atractive brunette between 25 and 30, was found lying face down in the surf clad only in brassiere and panties. The body of a boy, about seven or eight years old, was 100 yards away.

A coroner's jury called the deaths homicide.

An autopsy showed the woman had not been criminally attacked.

Sheriff Quave said the woman had been severely beaten about the head, and slashed across the forehead. She had multiple skull fractures.

The child, he said, had been "hit at least 20 times in the head with a blunt, heavy instrument."

Efforts to establish their identities immediately were unsuccessful.

Sheriff Quave said the woman appeared to be of Latin extraction.

William Lee Sprinkle, Pass Christian fisherman, found the body of the woman about 3 a. m., 20 miles west of Gulfport. Three hours later, J. V. Bech, of Henderson Point, found that of the boy.

The sheriff said there were no signs of a struggle on the beach. He said he thought the pair had been killed elsewhere and then left on the beach.

Atlantan Turns Back For More Navy Leave

DALLAS, May 27—(AP). Sailor W. W. Standifer rolled happily back toward Atlanta Sunday night after crossing a third of the continent to find his Navy leave had been extended 30 days.

Standifer, his wife and two small children left Atlanta early Saturday to rejoin his ship on the west coast. An hour later, his leave came through. Police in Texas, Arkansas and New Mexico were on the alert.

Standifer drove into a Dallas filling station early Sunday. Attendant Jewell Walker had read of his plight. Conversation established Standifer as the man. Police verified the leave extension and the sailor and his family swiftly reversed their course for another month back home.

KOREANS SHELTER WOUNDED PRIVATE

Aid Reaches Last of Gloucesters

By JOHN RANDOLPH

WESTERN FRONT, Korea, May 27—(AP)—Help reached Britain's lost First Battalion of the Gloucestershire Regiment—but it came a month too late for all but one dazed and unbelieving survivor.

He was Pvt. Lionel Essex, English rifleman who crawled away from the scene of massacre the night of April 25 and hid with a kindly Korean family for 33 days. A Greek patrol found him Saturday night in a pouring rainstorm.

With the exception of the 49 men who fought their way back from the trap last month, he is the only known survivor of some 600 Britishers who battled for two days after they were surrounded by two Chinese corps.

The rest of the battalion, except for some who must have been taken prisoner, were also found Sunday—still lying in the hill trap or scooped into shallow graves by the Chinese.

At the foot of the hill was the wreckage of the battalion—vehicles and equipment—burned trucks, wrecked Bren gun carriers, scattered ammunition and smashed machine guns.

All over the area were the mute symbols that are found on any battlefield—the empty helmets and the crumpled cloth caps of the dead.

Pvt. Essex, who had been shot in the arm and leg by the Chinese, was rushed into the medics for evacuation.

This story was told by the Greek officer who found him, Maj. P. Pantelis Kalamakis of Athens, operation officer of the Greek battalion. He was making a personal reconnaissance at the time.

"We went into the village of Paegan just below the Imjin," the major said in halting, but understandable, English.

"A Korean ran up and shouted. He pulled our sleeves. We followed.

"We went in and saw this Englishman. He could hardly believe. He was thin, pale, and hairy.

"He said, nearly as I remember: 'For this moment, I waited. I prayed to God you'd come.'

"Then he cried.

"Then he began to laugh and I wanted to make him happy. I started to sing to him. I sang a song of yours, 'Bless 'Em All.'

"He knew some words—English soldier words. They were something about Bombay. I don't remember them all."

"We sat on the floor and we sang and sang. He was happy then. We started back. The Koreans, they carried him.

"On the way he told the story. They were outnumbered and could do nothing more. The Chinese came in and this man was wounded. He said one of these Chinks ran up and shot him while he lay on the ground. He shot him in the arm and leg. He had been shot before in the other leg.

"He could not walk. So he played dead. After, when the Chinese went, he started to crawl—not on his belly, but on his back and backward.

"He could not say how far but next day the Koreans found him.

"They took him and fed him in a dugout. The women washed him. They washed his clothes. But I think they tried to help his wounds. They treated him like a baby, but he couldn't eat their food. It made him sick."

"That's all I know; for they sent him back fast."

As the Greeks entered the area, a young British officer—one of

Air's Vandenberg to Testify In MacArthur Probe Today

By JAY WALZ
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

WASHINGTON, May 27—The Senate inquiry into the dismissal of General of the Army MacArthur turns Monday from the Army to the Air Force, as Gen. Hoyt Vandenberg becomes the fifth witness.

The Air Force member of the Joints Chiefs of Staff probably will be asked for his views on MacArthur's proposals that Communist bases beyond Korea—bases in Manchuria and the China mainland—should be bombed.

Vandenberg follows Gen. J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, who completed two days of testimony Saturday afternoon. Earlier witnesses were General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, chairman of the Joint Chiefs; General of the Army George Marshall, Secretary of Defense, and MacArthur himself.

Gen. Vandenberg

All the Administration witnesses have told the inquiring members of the Senate Foreign Relations and Armed Services Committees that MacArthur, as military commander in the field, went beyond his proper sphere of activity and that his proposals for enlarging the conflict against the Chinese Communists were rejected in Washington because it was thought they would lead to a third world war.

However, Sen. Robert A. Taft, of Ohio, declared Sunday that President Truman, himself, has risked another global war when "he moved into Korea."

"I don't think the Russians will go to war" the Republican leader told a television audience on the "Meet the Press" program. But he said he thought the Administration's foreign policy "risks war at every moment."

Taft disagreed with the recent testimony of Gen. Bradley that Russia might be incited to war by military disclosures made during the investigation itself.

"If we are weak anywhere, the Russians know it already," the Ohio Senator said, adding he thought the Senate investigation

Marines from Conley General Depot served as pallbearers and a Marine detachment from the Naval Air Station fired a rifle salute at the graveside in Roseland Cemetery. Parents of the Marine, Mr. and Mrs. William Gazaway, Sr., received the casket flag from T/Sgt. Jack Fichter, honor guardsman who accompanied the body here from New York. Young Gazaway was killed during fighting for a railroad station in Seoul last Sept. 27—12 days after he landed in Korea at Inchon. Plane 'Joy Ride' Claims 2 Lives

BLUE MOUNTAIN, Miss., May 27—(AP)—A light plane crashed and exploded into flames near here Sunday, killing two Memphis men taking a "joy ride" before dinner.

E. Earl Jernigan, 30, and John Langston, 35, were pinned beneath the two-seater piloted by Jernigan when it brushed against a tree and crashed during an attempted take off from a pasture.

Both men were attending a family reunion here.

A witness, R. B. Gowdy, of Blue Mountain, said the little plane faltered when the wing dipped and struck a pole on the takeoff. He said the plane righted itself after hitting the pole, but couldn't rise above the trees.

Iran Notified Oil Dispute Placed Before the Hague

British Offer To Arbitrate Stands

Special to The Atlanta Constitution

TEHRAN, Iran, May 27—The British government and the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company officially informed the Iranian government Sunday of their simultaneous but separate action at the Hague to place the Iranian Oil disputes before International Court of Justice.

George Middleton, counselor of the British Embassy, was understood to have assured Foreign Minister Bagher Kazemi in a half-hour talk that the British action was not designed to preclude direct negotiations between the two countries.

On May 19, Foreign Secretary Herbert S. Morrison, in a message to Premier Mohammed Mossadegh, refused to concede the right of the Iranian government to dispossess the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company through nationalization but offered to send a high diplomatic mission to Tehran and make all outstanding differences the subject of negotiations on a fair and equitable basis.

NO IRAN REPLY

Although the Iranian government has not replied to Morrison's message, Middleton was reported to have told Kazemi the original offer still stood and to have expressed the hope that Iran might yet avail herself of it.

Saturday the British government filed an application asking the World Court either to request Iran to submit the oil dispute to arbitration under the terms of the 1933 concession agreement or alternately to declare the expropriation of Anglo-Iranian by Iran to be a violation of this agreement and therefore contrary to international law.

Anglo-Iranian asked the president of the Court to proceed to appoint a single arbitrator to settle the dispute under the 1933 agreement.

FRASER'S LETTER

The notice of the Company's action was contained in a letter from Sir William Fraser, chairman of the company, to Finance Minister Mohammed Ali Varasteh. The letter was presented by Norman Richard Seddon, the Company's chief representative in Iran.

After noting with regret that in the view of the Iranian government the oil disnute was not a referable arbitration, Sir William indicated that the company had no choice but to turn to the World Court as provided for in Article 22 of the concession agreement.

As for the Iranian government's request that the company nominate representatives by Wednesday to discuss the execution of the nationalization law, Sir William informed the finance minister that Seddon would be available for a meeting "as a measure of respect to the Imperial (Iranian) government and the Iranian Parliament."

"On the other hand, having regard to the purpose of the discussions I must state that the representative of the company will be in a position only to listen to what is said and to report the substance to the Company in London," Sir William added.

Congressmen See Monopoly In Newsprint

Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, May 27—The House judiciary subcommittee on monopoly power urged strongly Sunday that anti-trust action and steps to encourage production are needed to alleviate a newsprint shortage that threatens the free press of the world.

These were the major recommendations in an unanimous final report of the subcommittee, based on a year's study of the newsprint industry.

The report said that the newsprint industry, hard hit by the depression of the thirties, has "feared more than anything else an excess of capacity with its consequent danger of overproduction." The whole emphasis in the industry, it was said, is on "stable prices, stable profits and stable levels of production."

Long-term contracts, end-use restrictions, resale price maintenance, international cartel arrangements, the report stated are among the devices used to attain this across-the-board stability.

The report indicated that legislation was needed to require foreign newsprint producers, doing business in the United States, to keep their books open for inspection here as a precedent for such trade. Rep. Emanuel Celler of New York, judiciary chairman who headed the special study, will offer the bill.

The subcommittee suggested also it might be well to amend the Securities Exchange Act to require that newsprint companies, whose securities are traded on an over-the-counter basis, give greater information on their structure, organization and activities.

"Despite the fact that American interests are so closely linked with the Canadian industry and that 90 percent of Canadian production is shipped in the interstate commerce of the United States," the report said, "The Canadian border has served as a convenient barrier to adequate investigation of the activities of newsprint companies."

It specifically recommended that anti-trust laws be "vigorously enforced against Canadian as well as American newsprint producers in order to protect the freedom of interstate and foreign commerce in newsprint."

ROME, May 28—Reports from 28 provinces in northern Italy, where 10,000,000 Italians are to elect new administrations in 2,735 municipalities for a five-year term, indicated that at midnight Sunday night the over-all percentage of voting, as given out by the government bureau, was between 60 and 65 percent. The polls will open again at 6 a. m. and close at 2 p. m. Monday.

In the April, 1948, national elections the first day of voting also yielded the same percentage, but the final tabulation showed that 92.2 percent of the voters had cast their ballots. How interested Italians are in these elections will therefore be seen only after all the ballots have been counted sometime Monday.

Despite Communist efforts to minimize the importance of the elections and keep the political campaign on local isues, anti-Communist parties decided to push for a showdown vote by basing their electoral propaganda on the issue between democracy and dictatorship. The results, therefore, are expected to give an accurate estimate of the present Communist and anti-Communist strength in Italy since 1948, when extreme leftwing parties polled more than 8,000,000 votes, or 31 percent of the total, and the pro-Catholic Christian Democrats 11,000,000 votes, or 48 percent.

Only minor incidents were reported by the police, who said that few attempts were made to influence the voting by chicanery or fraud.

In all provincial capitals, long queues formed in front of polling booths in the workers' districts soon after they opened at 5 a. m. And slackened off later. The opposite took place in the so-called middle-class sections, where voting did not get going until later in the morning and after sunset. The major parties made a determined effort to bring the voters to the polls, to prevent abstentions which they feel would favor the extreme leftwing parties.

Regimented by strong party discipline, the Communists and leftwing Socialists expected to have very few abstaining voters; as a result, their relatively small voting percentage would mean a smaller voting percentage for any Communist party.

In keeping with instructions issued by Ildefonso Cardinal Schuster, archbishop of Milan, parish priests in many churches of that diocese Sunday morning reminded the faithful during mass that failure to vote would be a mortal sin and that they must support those parties which have pledged themselves to defend the rights of the church and protect religious freedom. For Catholics a mortal sin is a very grave offense deserving "eternal punishment" according to their doctrines.

The Civic Committee, which is a nation-wide lay Catholic organization operated fleets of automobiles, trucks, and ambulances for members of the clergy, ailing people in hospitals, and other potential voters. In Venice gondolas and motorboats were chartered to bring the voters to the polls.

Luigi Gedda, head of the Civic Committee, predicted that the bloc formed in almost all municipalities by the Christian Democrats, Republicans, Liberals and Social Democrats (the rightwing Socialists) would defeat the "Communist and leftwing Socialist coalition by 2 to 1).

Postmen May Get Metal Hand Carts And Some, Even Motor Scooters

WASHINGTON, May 27—(U.P.)—After long years of hauling heavy bags on his aching shoulders, the postman is going to get a break.

Asst. Postmaster Gen. J. J. Redding disclosed Sunday that before long your mailman may be equipped with a metal carrier on wheels—much like a golf bag carrier—to trundle about his mail sack.

Not only that, but some postmen may even get motor scooters to haul their burden in areas where houses are far apart.

Redding disclosed that the Post Office Department is working on these and other streamlininng ideas in an interview on the Columbia Broadcasting System's Television program, "The Facts We Face."

Tell It to Moscow, Austin Advises Peace Propagandists

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., May 27—(AP)—Warren Austin, chief U. S. delegate to the United Nations, advised Communist peace propagandists Sunday night to go peddle their papers in Moscow and Peiping.

He used more diplomatic language. But that was the main idea in a long letter he wrote to Frederic Joliot-Curie, French atom scientist and Communist leader. The U. S. delegation made the text public here at about the time the letter was due to reach Joliot-Curie in Paris.

Austin's letter answered an appeal from the French scientist to support appearance of a delegation from the Communist-dominated World Peace Council before the UN to argue its program. The council recently framed a new Soviet-inspired "peace program" in Berlin.

"If your delegation honestly desires to make a contribution to peace," Austin wrote, "I suggest that it visit Moscow and urge the Soviet ruling circle to abide by the (UN) Charter and the other international agreements to which it is pledged.

"Your delegation could then proceed to Peiping, and urge the ruling circle there to end the aggression in Korea, withdraw its forces, and let the Korean people organize the indepencent, unified and Democratic nation the UN seeks for them.

"In Moscow, you could urge the leaders of World Communism to abandon their declared aims of taking over other people's countries by the well-known totalitarian tactics which led Hitler to disaster.

"Tell them there will not be a war unless they decide to precipitate it; that the peoples of the world want real peace with freedom as defined in the UN charter; but that they will not pay blackmail to aggressors.

"In Peiping you could tell the leaders that they cannot shoot their way into the UN. Remind them that it was only the Soviet Union that blocked a Security Council resolution giving formal guarantees on the security of China's borders."

Austin told the Frenchman that all the world peace council proposals "have already been debated at length with the Soviet spokesmen who originally put them forward in the General Assembly.

"After exhaustive debate, the UN rejected these proposals."

He said that honest co-operation by the Soviet Union under UN membership obligations was all that was needed now to assure world peace.

Fire Sweeps School in La.; Loss Million

LAKE CHARLES, La., May 27—(AP)—A furious fire swept through the Lake Charles High School Building Sunday night, causing a loss estimated at more than $1,000,000.

The blaze started in the building's central wing and spread rapidly throughout the cafeteria, auditorium, south and central wings. All of these segments were destroyed.

The blaze was discovered as 92 members of the 1951 graduating class, their families and friends, were gathering at the gymnasium about 300 feet from the main building for baccalaureate services. Many of the seniors openly wept.

Ralph James, news director of Radio Station KPLC, said Supt. of Schools G. W. Ford said the building was insured for $630,000 but that it would cost more than $1,000,000 to replace.

4 Albanians Lost in Gulf

CARRABELLE, Fla., May 28—(AP)—Coast Guard and volunteer searchers Sunday found no trace of four Albany, Ga., men who have been missing for 36 hours since they took an outboard-powered rowboat on a fishing trip into the Gulf near here.

W. S. Schley, commander of the Coast Guard Auxiliary at Panacea, said the men are Tom Barbre, J. L. Archer, Herb Dollar and Peter McGaigh.

He said he was afraid they were in the path of a violent storm Saturday.

Explorer Ellsworth Dies; Conquered Arctic Lands

NEW YORK, May 27—(AP)—Explorer Lincoln Ellsworth, who claimed 381,000 square miles of Antarctica for the United States in 1939, died at his hotel Saturday night.

His attorney said Ellsworth, 71, died of "a sudden heart attack" at the Hotel Carlyle, where he lived.

Lincoln Ellsworth

Ellsworth's wife, Mary Louise was with him when he ded.

Ellsworth conquered both the North Pole and the Antarctic.

His last major trip of exploration was a flight into the interior of Antartica in 1939. He was a lieutenant commander in the U. S. Naval Reserve at that time.

Burial will be at Hudson, Ohio, where the explorer's parents are interred.

In 1925, with another famous Arctic explorer, Capt. Roald Amundsen, Ellsworth set out by plane, intent on being the first to reach the North Pole by air.

During the trip, in two planes, they surveyed 120,000 miles of unknown territory.

But head winds kept them from their goal.

RESCUED AT SEA

It took a month for the men to join forces and get their remaining plane into the air.

It flew to within a mile of North Cape, Spitzbergen, then came down again, this time on the open sea.

They were rescued by a sealer.

Ellsworth also journeyed to the Arctic under water.

In 1931 he directed a scientific investigation for the Wilkins-Ellsworth trans-Arctic submarine expedition.

That same year he again went skyward, representing the American Geographic Society on the Arctic flight of the German dirigible, Graf Zeppelin.

Late in 1935 Ellsworth flew across the Antarctic, claiming 300,000 square miles of the continent for the U. S.

This feat won him a special gold medal from Congress.

Four years later he again flew into the interior of Antarctica. This time claiming another 81,000 square miles for the U. S.

Ellsworth conquered the North Pole in 1926 with Amundsen, in a semi-rigid dirigible, the "Norge."

Son of a wealthy Ohio coal mine operator, Ellsworth financed the polar flight.

Bodies, Beer All Mixed Up; Bier Snores Bring Police

By AL LANIER

SAVANNAH, May 27—(AP)—Two bodies and three beers got mixed up around the same bier at a funeral home early Sunday and a quaking mortician would not re-enter his sanctum until police unshrouded the mystery.

City Policeman L. E. (Brown Mule) Rowell and E. Weldy found the shivering white attendant waiting for them outside the funeral parlor when they answered an alarm there at 3:40 a. m.

The attendant explained that he had gone to sleep in the chapel of the mortuary. A body was in the chapel on a bier—a low table shrouded in velvet. Snores from the bier awakened him, said the attendant.

When the attendant refused to re-enter the parlor, the policemen probed the dark room with a flashlight.

They too heard snoring coming from the bier.

Finally approaching the body, the officers jerked aside the velvet shrouds to reveal a white man fast asleep in company with three bottles of beer.

Rowell and Weldy identified him as Bill D. Fleming, 47. They said he faces charges of being drunk in a funeral home. The man explained he had wandered into the funeral home looking for a place to rest.

Segregation Case To Open Before 3-Judge U. S. Court

By JOHN POPHAM
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

CHARLESTON, S. C., May 27—The Federal Court test case attacking the South's bi-racial public school systems as unconstitutional, which will open hearings here Monday before a three-judge bench has resulted in a wide variety of opinion throughout the region.

Although in general the sentiment of white Southerners favors the retention of segregated public schools and that of Negroes favors their abolition, the controversy at the leadership level has brought forth statements ranging from predictions of political reprisal to pleas for recognition of the need to exorcise past sins.

The question of whether Southern public opinion is ready to accept a drastic change in its racial education pattern has split Southern liberal forces down the middle and to a small extent has splintered the Negro leadership. Those who take a dim view of the lawsuit believe it presages the eventual loss of recent gains in race relations.

Political leadership throughout the region is overwhelmingly opposed to the court action and in recent months it has threatened on one hand to do away with the public school system and on the other has induced legislatures to appropriate hundreds of millions of dollars to equalize Negro and white school facilities on a separated basis.

WHITE VIEWPOINT

Most white Southerners seem agreed the region is not ready to mix whites and Negroes in the same public schools. Many of them, however, either individually or through local religious and and civic organizations, subscribe to the premise the South had long fallen down on its promises to provide equal school facilities for the minority race, and that the threat of court suits has been a major item in bestirring recent activity in that respect.

A survey of the Southern states indicates little awareness thus far on the part of the general public an all-out attack on the segregated public school system has been launched in the Federal courts in four different states. The prime reaction centers at high political levels, with little interest displayed at the grass-roots level despite newspaper publicity.

The reason for this seems to be the general public in recent months has associated most court actions with school equalization suits to which the general public has in effect, given support by the acceptance of new tax burdens to meet the costs.

PUBLIC REACTION

Also, the general public has associated many court actions with a series of Federal lawsuits to admit qualified Negro students to professional and graduate training schools in the South. These also have apparently met with general approval since seven states have done away with racial barriers in higher education, without "incidents" or strong protests.

A small segment of Negro leaders has expressed a feeling the antisegregation school suit is premature.

The arguments of the majority who support the suit's objectives, though, have been stated in several public addresses by Dr. Benjamin E. Mays, president of Morehouse College (Atlanta) and a director of the Southern Regional Council, the South's most effective interracial organization.

"Let us not onfuse the issue," Dr. Mays declares. "The question is not mixed schools. The question is can there be equality in segregation."

DR. MAYS' CONTENTION

To argue that the suit makes an attack on segregation because the initiators want Negro children to go to school with white children is to miss the point entirely, Dr. Mays contends. Negroes, he states, opposed the curtain on railroad dining cars not because they wanted to eat with white people but because they were embarrassed and made to feel as inferior persons.

The stress should not be on mixed schools, Dr. Mays argues, but on the inequality that results from the dual education systems. The suit represents a growing conviction among Negroes everywhere there can be no true equality under segregation, he adds.

Dr. Mays has declared that if we believe in the democratic way of perfecting social change we should abide by the decisions of the Federal court. He holds "the Negro has always relied upon the machinery of the law and the courts to gain his objective, the machinery which the white man has created."

Colgate W. Darden, Jr., president of the University of Virginia, has expressed the general attitude of those who caution against changing racial patterns in public schools at this time. He told a meeting of the governors of the Southern States they should establish a first-rate segregated public school system with members of both races serving on all school boards and commissions.

He also urged the governors to support the admitting of Negro students to the region's graduate schools, but added people feel quite differently about young children. "To attempt to mix pupils of both races in public schools," he said, would "open up a festering wound" and destroy the unity needed for future racial progress.

There is considerable interest in the fact the three-judge Federal court which will hear the suit here, consists of Judge John J. Parker, of Charlotte, N. C., chief justice of the Fourth Judicial Circuit; Judge George Bell Timmerman, of Columbia, S. C., and Judge J. Waties Waring, a member of a distinguished Charleston family, who has been socially ostracized by former friends and neighbors in recent years because of the liberal racial views expressed by him and his wife.

Relax Trade Restrictions, World Fund Tells Members

By FELIX BELAIR, JR.
New York Times News Service, Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, May 27—The International Monetary Fund notified its 49 member nations Sunday that they would soon be requested to eliminate or substantially modify exchange restrictions and other forms of discrimination against the trade of nations.

In its second annual report on exchange restrictions, the Bretton-Woods Agency reminded members that its special permission is required under the articles of agreement for signatory nations to retain exchange restrictions beyond March, 1952. Rather than await the deadline, the fund said it would soon initiate discussions with member countries.

Without mentioning any countries by name, the fund made it clear in the unanimous report that Great Britain was high on the list of nations it considers financially able to relax its complex system of exchange controls. With quiet acquiescence of this government, Britain has used the device to discriminate against western hemisphere products that must be paid for in dollars.

The case for early general compliance with the spirit of the Bretton-Woods agreement of 1944 was broadly stated in a letter of transmittal to members and the governors of the fund by A. B. Overby, Acting Chairman of the Executive Board and Acting Managing Director of the Institution.

IMPROVEMENT CITED

"During the past year," said Overby, "there has been considerable improvement in the balance of payments and reserve position of many countries. This improvement has in a number of cases been accompanied by a relaxation of restrictions on current payments.

"Generally speaking, however, the fund believes that the general improvement in the international financial position of many countries which has taken place warrants further relaxation of restrictions and reduction of discrimination."

Because all members of agency's executive board must approve the language of its public reports, the approach to exchange restrictions was not nearly as sharp as many of its permanent staff would have preferred. In terms of economic diplomacy, however, the report was notable for its candor.

EXPRESSES APPROVAL

Inertia, fear of the future, protection of vested economic interests from outside competition and political bargaining practices were given as reasons why some member nations retained exchange restrictions beyond the time when they were needed for financial reasons.

The report noted with approval such progress as had been made during the past year toward relaxation of discrimination in trade but added:

"In many countries, however, the extent of this action could not yet appear to have been commensurate with the financial improvement.

"Especially, the marked improvement of the gold and dollar positions of many countries would seem to remove the basis of most currency discrimination on current transactions which continues to be practiced to a considerable degree."

BRITAIN IGNORES RULE

Under existing practices, unwanted imports are kept out of a given country by the simple device of refusing to make exchange available for the purpose. The Bretton Woods agreement permitted use of the device during the first five years of its operation because the postwar financial positions of the signatories were too strained to pay for the goods that importers might otherwise bring in.

In the case of Britain, for instance, the device is employed to keep out American and other dollar products that are sometimes available at lower prices than articles imported from countries with which Britain has accumulated substantial sterling balances. This government until now has "winked" at the practice although Britain is bound by treaty and separate financial agreements not to discriminate against United States products.

House Group Urges Action On Israel Aid

New York Times News Service
Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WASHINGTON, May 27—(AP)—Early study and favorable action on bills to authorize economic aid to the government of Israel were urged Sunday by a bipartisan group of 156 members of the House of Representatives.

The group's declaration was submitted to House Majority Leader John W. McCormack and Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin, Jr., both of Massachuestts.

Its signers included 14 of the 27 members of the House Foreign Affairs Commitee. Of the 45 New York Representatives in the House, 35 had their names on the declaration.

Several weeks ago McCormack and Martin jointly introduced a bill which would give financial aid in the form of grants to Israel. It would authorize the appropriation of up to $150,000,000 for this purpose during the next fiscal year.

A like bipartisan bill had been introduced in the Senate with sponsors. The declaration said:

"It is the sense of the undersigned members of the House of Representatives that the United States should now grant economic assistance to the government of Israel in order to assist it in absorbing its large influx of immigration and in developing its natural resources and industries, so that, with its security and independence thus strengthened, Israel may become a military, economic and ideological bastion for the free world in the Middle East, aiding in the maintenance of world peace, security and liberty, thereby promoting the general welfare and security of the United States."

Dionne Quints, 17 Today, Don't Go Steady, But Learn Home Chores

CALLENDER, Ont., May 27—(U.P.)—The world will feel a little older Monday when the Dionne quintuplets celebrate their 17th birthday anniversaries.

Papa Oliva Dionne said his famous five daughters now consider themselves grown-up young ladies—old enough for lipstick, high-heeled shoes, dances and thoughts of marriage.

"They have no boy friends yet," he said, but they are being trained to become efficient housewives in the French-Canadian tradition.

The quints began inviting boys to parties only in the past two years and even now do not have regular Saturday night dates.

And they are still young enough to enjoy playing pranks at square dances, Dionne said. Sometimes they switch partners and giggle merrily as the partners dance on wihtout realizing the switch was made.

No Church Alone Can Crush World's Evils, Says Minister

CINCINNATI, May 27—An Episcopalian told a group of Presbyterians Sunday night that no church, "however strong she may be," can conquer alone the evils now plaguing mankind.

"The forces of evil are powerful beyond description, and must be faced on a world stage," said the Rt. Rev. Henry Knox Sherrill, presiding bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church.

Bishop Sherrill, who also is president of the National Council of the Churches of Christ in the U. S. A., spoke at a worship service of delegates to the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the U. S. A.

The national council is an organization of 33 Protestant denominations, which have more than 30,000,000 members.

Bishop Sherrill said "certainly here there need be no extended description of the disorder, chaos and confusion so prevalent in the world."

The churches, he added, have learned "all too gradually this stern fact" that one denomination alone can not cope with all the problems.

And the New York clergyman continued, Christians have made progress in co-operation, although to a certain extent they have been forced by events.

He said, however, that they also had initiated much of the co-operation because they loved one another. He explained:

"Through the conferences at Edinburgh, Jerusalem, Oxford, Amsterdam, Cleveland and through many years of working together in long-established organizations, men and women in the various communions have come to know one another, trust one another, and even more im-Christian shrdlu ETAOIN MH M portant in the experience of Christian worship and service have realized the depth of our common faith and purpose."

He said it is essential that the churches never lose sight of the fact that behind governments, even behind the Iron Curtain, "are millions of men and women, caught in the web of international disorder, desiring for themselves no power over others, but the blessing of peace and a higher standard of living."

The bishop said that "the deep, underlying cause for all our difficulty" generally can be attributed to the failure of men to follow Christ's teachings.

Bishop Sherrill gave his listeners cause for hope.

"The forces of evil are unquestionably of great power," he said, "but not as much so as the invisible forces of the Spirit."

Danish Prince Finishes 8th in Soap Box Race

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 27—(AP)—Prince Ingolf, of Denmark, 11, raced his soap box car along a 400-meter (1,300-foot) course near Frederiksborg Castle Sunday and finished eighth among 20 youthful drivers.

Among those cheering the prince from the grandstand at the finishing line were his father, Prince Knud, heir apparent to the throne; his mother, Princess Caroline Mathilde, and his sister, Princess Elizabeth, 16.

The race was a local one, sponsored by the YMCA and the Christian Scout Association.

The Prince's speed for the course was 50¼ seconds, an average of 28 kilometers (17.36 miles) per hour. He finished 15 seconds after the girl winner, Inger Nielsen, 14. Ingolf's car, which he made himself, was registered in the "ball-bearing class."

Before the race Prince Knud inspected all the cars at the starting line. He made sure that his son's jalopy was properly oiled and his crash helmet duly fastened.

Ingolf commented after the race:

"Gee whiz! That was a tough fight. Wait till next time. I might have some improvements for the car in my mind.

The Romans used cabbage poultices on wounds.

2 Georgians Killed, 4 Lost, 5 Hurt in War

Two Georgia fatalities—one an East Point private—and nine other Georgia casualties in Korea were announced Sunday by the Defense Department.

MONDAY MORNING PULPIT

Dr. Brokhoff Tells Holy Spirit Meaning

"What Is the Holy Spirit?" This sermon, one in the series appearing in Monday Morning Pulpit, was preached by Dr. Brokhoff under the title "What No Man Can Buy."

By J. R. BROKHOFF,
Pastor, Lutheran Church of the Redeemer

Are you a Holy Spirit-less Christian? It is possible, for there were such Christians soon after Pentecost. St. Paul asked the Ephesians, "Have you received the Holy Spirit since you believed?" They said they never heard there was a Holy Spirit. How then could they have Him? When one considers the background of this case, it is amazing the Ephesians did not have the Holy Spirit. Apollos, an eloquent preacher, was their preacher. Surely they had the Bible. They worshipped and prayed. They had a church. In spite of all this, they did not have the Spirit.

Dr. Brokhoff

The same can be true of Christians today. We have good preachers and comfortable churches. We have all the mechanics of a busy congregational program. We have the Bible and worship and prayer. Too often the one thing lacking our churches and lives is the Holy Spirit. How then does one get the Holy Spirit?

When the average person thinks of the coming of the Holy Spirit, he usually thinks of something spectacular. That is perhaps due to the signs accompanying the original Pentecostal experience. We think of the rushing, mighty wind, and the cloven tongues of fire settling on the Disciples' heads. If you will go to the Record, you will find that the language is figurative. The Spirit came like a rushing, mighty wind. He settled upon their heads like cloven tongues of fire. The Author is simply trying to convey to us the truth that the Spirit came into their lives with great force and power as the might of the wind. The cloven tongues of fire mean that the Spirit put their hearts on fire for God and His Cause. Therefore, there is no need of having a special vision or trance to get the Holy Spirit. Rather the Spirit usually comes in an orderly, quiet, and peaceful manner.

One of the orderly ways of the Spirit's coming to the believer is the Word of God. The Holy Spirit produced the Word, the Bible. He is in the words and the message. They are interwoven and interallied. They cannot be separated. When the Word is taught, preached, and read the Spirit lodges in the heart and produces the faith and good works of the Christian.

This happened when Peter preached to Cornelius and his friends. Peter was directed to Cornelius by a dream, for Cornelius was anxious to know more about Jesus. When Peter came, Cornelius gathered his family and friends in his home and listened to Peter's story. He told them about Jesus' life, death, and resurrection. It was the message of the gospel. While they were listening, the account says that the Holy Spirit came upon them.

For this reason, it is important to go to church to hear the gospel message. Church-going dare never be a habit or a social custom. When we listen to God's Word, the Holy Spirit comes to us. In the same way, the Holy Spirit comes to those listening to a teacher rightly dividing the Word of truth. For this same reason, you need to make the Bible your companion and have a daily tryst with it. The Spirit will come to you as you read it.

Baptism brings with it the Holy Spirit. You will recall that this was the means of Jesus' receiving the Holy Spirit. After Pentecost, Peter told his listeners that if they repented and were baptized they would receive the Spirit. This happens today when persons are baptized.

You may be aware of the means, but still not have the Spirit. Yet you may want the Spirit more than anything else in life. There is a price to be paid for receiving the Spirit. It is not one of money. It is a more difficult price, and because it is so high a price, not all are willing to pay it. The Spirit cannot be earned or bought. He is a gift, for the coming of the Spirit is God's giving of himself. The price we must pay to receive Him is spiritual preparation. Open wide your heart right now and plead, "Come into my heart, Lord Jesus."

"Breathe on me, O Breath of God
Till I am wholly Thine.
Till every earthly part of me
Glows with Thy fire divine."

(Single copies of this sermon may be secured by writing to the Christian Council of Atlanta.)

Sawyer Proposes Stock Sale To Settle Dollar Line Dispute

WASHINGTON, May 27—(AP)—Secretary of Commerce Sawyer proposed Sunday that controlling interest in the American President Lines be sold to the highest bidder to reduce the bitter fight over the stock to a simple issue of who gets the cash: The government or R. Stanley Dollar and Associates.

He said such action would "free the practical business operation (of the big steamship line) from the annoyance, burden and handicap of the litigation."

And at the same time, he added, it would dispose of charges there is a desire to "nationalize" shipping.

The secretary made his proposition in a personal letter to Dollar on the eve of possible Supreme Court action in a contempt of court case in which Sawyer and nine other present and former officials have been threatened with jail.

The U. S. Court of Appeals here has decreed jail for the nine unless they comply with its order to turn over the stock in the $68,000,000 property to the Dollar interests. The officials have obtained an order from Chief Justice Vinson of the highest court staying all proceedings in the case pending a review of the contempt action, and Dollar attorneys have asked the full court to overrule Vinson.

The litigation, going on since 1945, is over stock delivered to the government in the 1930's in connection with financial help to the Dollar interests. American President is the successors to the old Dollar Steamship Line. The Government claim is that the securities were turned over to it outright. The Dollars contend they were merely pledged for a loan that has been paid.

Sawyer, in tonight's letter, emphatically stated the opinion that the Government is entitled to the stock, and said he would like to see it keep the asset.

But he said his primary interest and that of the Maritime Administration in his department is "to see that all segments of American shipping operate at their greatest efficiency."

His proposal: (a) Sale of the stock by competitive bidding, with the Government and the Dollar interests releasing all claims to the actual securities; (b) placement of the proceeds in escrow, and (c) payment of the cash to the side determined by the courts to be the owner.

That would preserve both Government and Dollar rights to carry the suit to a conclusion and at the same time free the business operation from interference resulting from the litigation, Sawyer said.

Ex-Convict Held On Two Charges

A 48-year-old Negro ex-convict is being held for the Grand Jury under $2,500 bond each on charges of burglary and mayhem in connection with an early morning battle in a northwest Atlanta home.

Walter M. Pace, Jr., of 770 Lindsay St., N. W., told Recorder Jimmy Webb he surprised the Negro in his home. Pace, a husky veteran of World War II, said his right ear was almost bitten off during a struggle with the intruder.

Dets. J. J. Morris and W. E. Harwell said the Negro, Arthur Allen, of 520 Griffin St., N. W., was arrested a short distance from the home.

CEREBRAL PALSY SCHOOL BENEFIT

Planes To Drop Leaflets Boosting Newsboy's Day

By KATHERINE BARNWELL

More than 50,000 leaflets reminding Atlantans that Wednesday is Old Newspaperboys Day will be dropped over the City Wednesday morning from planes provided by the Georgia wing, Civil Air Patrol.

Finders of the leaflets will be advised:

"Buy a paper—and help a handicapped child."

Nearly 1,000 persons have volunteered to sell papers (special cerebral palsy editions) on Old Newspaperboys Day, sponsored by the Variety Club of Atlanta, in cooperation with The Atlanta Journal and Constitution, for the benefit of Atlanta's Cerebral Palsy School.

Every dime collected will go to expand present limited facilities for the education and treatment of children with cerebral palsy — a neru-muscular disorder caused by injury to the brain.

CAP planes will drop the leaflets urging support of Old Newspaperboys Day before the start of a spectacular parade at 11:30 a. m. The parade will start at Peachtree and Baker Streets and move down Peachtree and Forsyth Streets to The Journal-Constitution Building.

Wearing high silk hats and "newspaperboy" aprons, volunteers will march in the parade along with 100 Atlanta Journal carriers and 100 Constitution carriers.

The Third Army Band, Marist College Band, West End Elementary Band and other music-making groups will participate.

Other parade features will include a cerebral palsy float, the Khorassan Grotto Patrol and Mounted Patrol, ambulances, fire trucks, Betty Blue, "a singing news lady," and Boyce Smith, "a singing newsboy," who will perform as they pass on trucks equipped with pianos and public address systems.

Jack Dumestre, who is in charge of zoning, distribution and transportation for the sale, said all "old newspaperboys" have been assigned their stations and the city should be covered completely. He added everything was "shaping up fine."

Volunteers include businessmen, housewives, teachers, students, mothers of cerebral palsied children and men and women representing many and varied occupations.

One "old newspaperboy" will wear a genuine leopard skin suit as he sells!

Cotton Watts, an old-time minstrel man as well as an "old newspaperboy," said he thought his suit would help attract attention. He wears it while doing a song-and-dance act at a local nightclub, and he'll don it for his paper-selling act.

Watts has been assigned the corner of Auburn and Peachtree Streets (at the Flat Iron Building) at which to sell papers.

"That's the same corner I had," he recalled, "when I sold papers here about 25 years ago. I'll feel right at home."

Nearly 1,000 bus and trolley operators are going to assist with the campaign.

Jesse Walton, president of Street Electric Railway Union 732, and Leland Anderson, president of the Atlanta Transit Company, arranged the sale on wheels. Both said this was the first time such a benefit sale ever has been permitted aboard Atlanta's trolleys and busses.

John Fulton, chairman of Old Newspaperboys Day, said all radio stations had co-operated in promoting the drive. He added he believed the campaign would be "a tremendous success."

Fund Gift Pace Set By Free Methodists

By THOMAS M. ELLIOTT

Free Methodists and Seventh Day Adventists last year set the pace for 53 American church denominations in the per capita contributions of the $1,137,554,266 given by all churches for all purposes. Free Methodists are credited with a per capita contribution of $169.11, while Seventh Day Adventists gave $136 per capita.

Southern Baptists, with a membership of six and a quarter millions, gave $31,316,318. United Methodists, with a membership of nearly 9,000,000, gave $36,590,188. Adventists, with a membership of 243,193, gave $28,166,342. One Adventist church in California, with a membership of 1,562 persons, made a per capita offering of $220. The general average of per capita gifts for 53 denominations was $1.35 last year, while that of the entire Adventist denomination was $29.98.

Pennies From Heaven

Rain in torrents was falling as a widow made her way across Broad Street at Marietta. She had no umbrella, and holes in her shoes had let water thoroughly wet her feet. In her purse there was no money, save for one brown penny. Back home there were children to be provided for, and the widow had no job. The outlook was dark and gloomy. That widow is a daughter of the Eternal Father, in whom she had implicit trust, and who had promised not to forsake her, and she proposed to keep her heart fixed on Him.

As she crossed Broad Street in that downpour of rain, she saw, lying there on the pavement, a $5 bill. That bill was picked up and placed in the purse to keep company with the lone brown penny. That night the widow renewed her vows of full consecration to her Father. In a dream that night she had a vision in which her Heavenly Father appeared to her very plainly and said to her, "Thee and thine shall never want." For these several years the widow and her children have never known want for one hour. Maybe it's a fact that "righteousness is profitable in all things." Suppose we Georgians give it a faithful tryout.

No Physical Results

A group of preachers were holding a pow-wow, with different ones relating incidents of their ministry as to the large numbers of people attending their churches, the large sums of money gathered for various causes, and the numbers of persons joining the churches. In the group of preachers was one man who had a rather difficult and unfertile field in which to labor and that brother could not give an elaborate report as to his church and ministerial labors. He said, "We had some meetings, but no revivals and no physical results."

His use of the words, "physical results," made impression and furnished suggestion for a line of thought. Physical results are frequently misleading and sometime prove more of a liability than an asset. In God's work there is no such thing as "no physical results." Men cannot do faithful, spirit-endued work for God and there be no results.

A Georgia camp meeting seemed a failure, so men said, with only one little boy converted. But that little boy, Jimmy Andrew, changed the course of history.

"Physical results" are deceptive. On Palm Sunday the world of men shouted themselves hoarse as they welcomed Jesus Christ. Yet before the week had passed that same crowd helped hang Him on a tree. Deep rivers make very little noise, and $15 rattletrap jalopies make more noise than 10-ton vans, but the vans are the vehicles that carry the pay-loads. "Physical results" oftentimes deceived people. Not all that glitters is gold. In a dime store you can get an acorn-size glass diamond for a quarter, but a real diamond that size will cost a bit more, even without a sales tax.

Gate City Guard Recalls Constitution's Henry Grady

By HERMAN HANCOCK

Tall stories and nostalgic recollections of yesteryear highlighted the dinner attended by five of the 11 surviving members of the old Gate City Guard during the weekend at the Shrine Mosque.

Eighty-one-year-old Dr. Arthur H. VanDyke, a member for 61 years, was host and was elected president. Shades of The Constitution's Henry Grady, regarded as "the spokesman for the New South" after the War Between the States, and others prominent in the post-bellum era hovered as speakers recalled the glories and hardships of the period.

The old Gate City Guard, organized in 1857, is now composed of those who were members before it was inducted into Federal service for the Spanish-American War. Prior to that, the Guard was subject to orders from Georgia's governors only.

80 YEARS YOUNG

Others attending the party were Frank M. Berry, an 80-year-old youngster and a member for 65 years, having joined when he was 15 years old; Walter E. Hancock, 76, a member for 60 years; Cris Essig, 81, a member for 53 years, and J. Charles Gavan, 76, a member for 59 years. Other pre-1898 members not present were Walter C. Bennett, Col. Fred W. Benteen, Mark Hightower, Tom Longley, Charlie Murray, and Murray Weems.

Those attending the dinner have lived collectively 394 years in Atlanta. They saw the city grow from a crossroads trading post to its present dominating position as the Gateway to the South.

KNEW GRADY

As lads, they knew and were awed by Henry Grady. They also recalled the old days when one bought "beer by the yard." One walked into a saloon and bought a string of tickets, each of which was good for a mug. They recalled internationally-renowned artists who played at the old De-Give Opera House, of the time when the City Hall was located on the site of the present state capitol, the first telephone, the first horse-drawn streetcar and the time when Atlanta's water came from a "not so good" artesian well at Five Points.

The Guard organized the first band Atlanta ever had. The company originally averaged about 100 select members. Hancock remembers "it was sort of slobbish" and tells of a time when his commanding officer reprimanded him for talking to a "regular Army man."

"LITTLE SNOBBISH"

"That fellow is in the service and 18 dollars a month he gets paid. You cannot afford to associate or fraternize with him," Hancock said he was told. Others recalled the times they bewitched the populace with band-led parades when they greeted dignitaries who visited Atlanta.

"We really put the dog on," Dr. VanDyke said, "and everybody loved it. We were a strutting crew."

The Guard was the first Southern military organization to visit the North after the war. Before it left there was apprehension about whether the safari would not start the war all over again. Old-timers said they went as gentlemen and made friends.

Author of their famous marching song—"Dude's March"—is still unknown, according to the old-timers.

Rollins Banks On Wagner Measure Veto

By RICHARD H. PARKE
Special to The Atlanta Constitution

WINTER PARK, Fla., May 27—An uneasy calm settled over strife-torn Rollins College here Sunday as students and faculty members awaited the action of Gov. Fuller Warren on a bill revamping the institution's board of trustees.

The measure, which is expected to strengthen the hand of Dr. Paul A. Wagner, deposed president, in his fight for reinstatement, was sent to the governor Saturday after the State Legislature had refused to reconsider it. The bill appoints nine new board members, reappoints two present members and provides that future trustees must be Florida residents.

Dr. Wagner charges he was dismissed illegally by 11 of the 21 trustees at a meeting in New York last month. His discharge followed an announcement that 23 faculty members had been dropped in an "economy" drive.

Both factions in the dispute spent the day planning strategy, and it was reported that strong pressure was being exerted on Gov. Warren to veto the measure since a large majority of students and faculty are opposed to Dr. Wagner. If the Governor neither signs nor vetoes the bill it will become law within five days after reaching his desk.

Meetings also were being held here Sunday behind closed doors to discuss details of a session of the full board of trustees scheduled for 10 a. m. Tuesday.

All the injured were reported in serious condition.

16 Happy Marines Start Home After Rescue From Reds

TOKYO, May 27—(AP)—Sixteen jubilant U. S. Marines, free after being held prisoners by the Chinese for nearly six months, started the first leg of their trip home, a pooled field dispatch reported Sunday from East-Central Korea. Their captors had walked them more than 260 miles.

Gaunt but devoutly thankful after their long ordeal, the Leathernecks were driven to an air evacuation base for flight to Pusan. There they will be given further physical examination aboard a hospital ship and then sent home.

Two other Marines were hospitalized and an Army man sent back to his own outfit.

ASK PRAYER

Four days ago the group was saved by a tank patrol in no-man's land near Chuchon. The Chinese released them near Allied lines.

"We all wanted to go to church this morning as a group," one of the Marines said. "We couldn't do it because we hadn't finished out interrogation yet.

"Anyway, we asked the chaplain to say special prayers of thanks for us—as well as prayers for those the Chinese haven't yet released.

"Nineteen Christians came back in our group. That's more Christians than our group had to begin with. We knew something pretty big was taking care of us."

The Marines spoke kindly of their Chinese captors. One who had been a prisoner of the Japanese after his capture on Wake Island in World War II, said there was no comparison.

"When the Chinese had food they shared it with us. And they insisted we drink only boiled water," he explained. "When they had medical supplies, they treated our sick men."

The Marines had been captured near the Changjin Reservoir in action early last December.

A sergeant who has spent 28 of his 52 years in the Marine Corps said the Chinese were "very kind . . . they asked us to be more interested in our government and politics when we returned. They wanted us to believe that Wall Street caused all the wars."

The dispatch did not identify any of the Marines.

All Controls Depend on Beef-DiSalle

Program a 'Hoax,' Cattleman Says

WASHINGTON, May 27—(U.P.)—Price Controller Michael V. DiSalle said Sunday the government will have to give up its entire price control program if it cannot curb beef prices.

He made the statement on the National Broadcasting Company television program, "American Forum of the Air."

"Judge" Joe G. Montague, general counsel of the Texas and Southwestern Cattle Raisers Association, charged on the same program DiSalle's beef price rollback order was a "hoax" on the housewife and would "inevitably" lead to a severe beef shortage and black markets.

"The average housewife has been suffering from a meat famine for some time because she can't afford to buy meat," DiSalle retorted.

80 PER CENT RISE

"Beef has gone up more than 80 percent in price since January, 1950. We are bringing it back within reach of people and ending a famine that has been going on for some time."

Montague asserted it was not feasible to control meat or livestock prices, and claimed Congress did not intend to control such products when it passed the control law.

"Why didn't Congress say so?" DiSalle demanded. "If we can't control the price of beef, we'll have to give up the entire control program. What's the use of controls if you can't control the biggest cost of living item?"

ATTACKS ROLLBACK

Montague is one of the cattlemen who has been attacking the beef rollback during several weeks of hearings by Senate and House committees. The Senate agriculture committee has denounced the rollback and the House agriculture committee has indicated it may do likewise.

Under DiSalle's plan, live cattle prices were rolled back 10 percent last Monday. Two more rollbacks of 4½ percent each are due to take effect Aug. 1 and Oct. 1 from the farm all the way to the corner butcher shop.

DiSalle is counting on the last two steps to roll back prices 8 to 9 cents a pound by October.

Atomic Energy Project Topic Of Educators

Dr. Alexander Grant Ruthven is spending the last year and a half of his 22 years as president of the University of Michigan in promoting a vast program of atomic energy research.

The 69-year-old educator, who retires June 30, arrived in Atlanta Sunday to tell Michigan alumni about the Phoenix Project, a 10-year, $6,500,000 study program of problems confronting a nation conscious of atomic power.

In Arabic mythology, the Phoenix was a bird that dashed itself into a fire and rose from the ashes with a new vitality.

"We want to help see that something good comes out of the ashes of Hiroshima and Nagasaki," Dr. Ruthven explained.

The Phoenix Project was conceived by the student body of the University of Michigan as a memorial to Michigan's World War II dead, the president said. Alumni have organized behind the drive for project funds and have raised more than $4,500,000 in cash from corporations and individuals, he said.

Some 40 researchers are now working with the project, investigating atomic energy's relation to economics, sociology, political science, the physical sciences and "all phases of life that atomic power affects," Dr. Ruthven said. Other universities will tie in with the various phases of the project, he added.

Dr. Ruthven came to the University of Michigan 40 years ago as a graduate student and has been there ever since. As resident, he has spoken to alumni groups as far away as Egypt.

This is his first visit to Atlanta. Monday night at Peacock Alley he will speak to many of Georgia's 400 Michigan alumni. Tuesday night he will be guest at a dinner at the capital City Club, meeting with some 25 men in the field of education.

'Dead' Mine Kills Writer, Officer

TOKYO, May 27—(AP)—A Communist road mine over which hundreds of vehicles had passed safely exploded in Korea Saturday, killing an Australian war correspondent and a Canadian officer.

The victims were Derek Pearcy of Reuters and Lt. Joe Levinson. Their British driver, John Blackwell, was seriously injured.

Pearcy was killed on his 25th birthday anniversary, 17 days after he returned to the war front from Japan.

The mine exploded near the command post of the Canadian 25th Brigade.

Robbers Ask Victims—How Y' Like Our Art?

CHICAGO, May 27—(AP)—The two gunmen introduced themselves and entered Steven Majercik's home early Sunday.

They requested Saturday's receipts from the Majercik Meat Market. One went with Mrs. Majercik to get the money. The other tried polite conversation.

"Nasty day, isn't it?" Majercik let it pass. He said he was in no mood for small talk.

After pocketing $400, the gunmen bound the couple's wrists with coat hangers, expressed professional satisfaction over a "workmanlike, artistic" job, and departed.

State Revenue Research Unit Revival Urged

By M. L. ST. JOHN

VOGEL STATE PARK, May 27—The State Revenue Department may create a unit to continue taxation research carried on for three years by the defunct State Tax Revision Committee.

The Georgia Academy of Social Sciences, ending its annual meeting here Sunday, recommended continuation of tax studies so Georgia may keep abreast of improvemests over the nation.

Deputy State Revenue Commissioner William Lester, who conducted studies as director of the Tax Revision Committee, said he, Revenue Commissioner Charlie Redwine, and Gov. Talmadge already have discussed plans to have the Revenue Department continue the studies.

Speaking to the Academy, Lester said the Legislature could complete almost all of the total tax revision program next January by improving the income tax law and abolishing the state property tax. He pointed out that the Tax Revision Committee recommended a sales tax co-ordinated with the sales tax co-ordinated with an income tax, and that the income tax law has not been co-ordinated with the sales tax.

Participating in the panel discussion were Kankakee (Buck) Anderson, of Cedartown, and Mrs. Cullen Gosnell, of Decatur.

Solons' Help For Marietta Housing Asked

Marietta is among aircraft centers where a shortage of housing is "the major obstacle in the way of the nation's aircraft production program," the president of the International Association of Machinists claimed Sunday.

The union leader, Al Hayes, addressed a letter to all members of the House banking committee which is studying a proposed defense housing bill. He said:

"Your committee should know that unless action is taken immediately to provide adequate housing in aircraft centers, we will be unable to provide sufficient manpower to meet the expanding production schedules."

Declaring the IAM—contracted plants employ 271,000 aircraft workers in the United States and Canada, Hayes said that these workers "do not ask for marble palaces, but they justifiably want their families to live in comfort at rents they can afford."

He added that "speculative builders are not doing the job" of home building to meet an expected upsurge in aircraft plant personnel. Spokesmen for the real estate industry have opposed the Government defense program on the grounds that private industry can produce the needed home units.

Hayes also called attention to Los Angeles and San Francisco, and Hartford, Conn. Reports from IAM members in those areas and in Marietta, he said, "indicate an almost complete lack of rental housing to take care of further expansion in such vital plants."

Doris Lockerman, public relations director for Lockheed in Marietta, said Sunday there would be a shortage if the plant opened tomorrow, but that she believed private builders would take care of all the plants future housing needs if they got building priorities.

"The IAM president is just trying to make sure the builders do get support from the Government," she said.

John A. Heck, Cobb County commissioner, said only a lack of building priorities or a recently threatened water shortage in the county would effect housing. He said the water situation was being cleared up and that he believed the builders would get financial and priority help from the government.

"The planned employment program the plant has will provide a gradual increase in the worker population," he explained.

Milledgeville Store Wrecked By Sabbath Blast Laid to Gas

Constitution State News Service

MILLEDGEVILLE, May 27—Hood Grocery store, located on North Jefferson Street, was demolished early Sunday when an explosion wrecked the brick building and fire swept through the ruins.

Police Chief Eugene Ellis said the explosion probably was caused when gas from a broken line, accumulating in the store after it was closed Saturday night, was set off by a spark from an electric motor.

The heavy explosion shook houses in an area of several blocks about the store but no damage was reported other than to the grocery establishment.

Witnesses in the neighborhood said it seemed as if all the contents of the store were thrown high into the air, and then fire started in the ruins.

Paving operations were going on in front of the store during the past week and investigating officers believed that a gas pipe had been pulled loose from its connections.

The blast occured shortly after 8 a. m.

ranging from $2 to $6 weekly. The union said this falls short of its goal.

"There has been no general wage increase in this bargaining unit since February, 1949," Smallwood said. "Stabilization regulations permit a full 10 percent (wage increase) on base wages of January, 1950.

STRIKE BALLOT TAKEN

"This will require more money than the company has offered, and union membership takes a dim view of any pay hike which fails to reach the maximum allowable under current wage controls, or widens the gaps between schedules and towns."

Each of the union's locals in the nine Southeastern states affected has been instructed to take a strike ballot.

"We expect that the balloting will be completed, and the decision made prior to the expiration of the (existing) contract," Smallwood said.

Simultaneously with its May 8 wage offer, the company proposed to extend all clauses covering working conditions for another year.

15 ITEMS IN DISPUTE

Sam E. Sims, chairman on the union's negotiating committee, said there are about 15 contractural items affecting working conditions still in dispute.

"The present contract is three years old," he added. "We have found flaws in it which need changing. While both the company and the union have been able to reach tentative agreement on numerous items in the new contract, there are about 15 basic matters on which we have not reached agreement."

G. D. Garner, Southern Bell vice president in charge of personnel, commented:

"We are surprised that a strike vote is being undertaken by union officers in face of the good progress that has been made in the negotiation. On a large majority of the contract items involving working conditions, tentative agreement has already been reached.

"For the past several days company representatives have been meeting with the union in day and night sessions in order to reach a settlement before expiration of the contract on June 4.

"Although the subject of wages has not been fully discussed, the union so far has demanded wage increases in excess of those allowable under the government wage stabilization formula. The company intends to use all reasonable means to effect a settlement on wages and working conditions, but it cannot agree to increases that do not conform to the government's wage stabilization program."

which jammed the highways leading to the north.

One American staff officer said, "I don't see how they can mount another offensive for three months. Maybe they'll listen to reason and give up this war."

UN forces were at Yangyang on the east coast, Inje in the mountainous east central sector, Hwachon on the western tip of the Hwachon reservoir, Youngpyong on the east central front and at Korangpo and north of Uijongbu in the west.

Upwards of 60,000 panic-stricken Reds milled in the great circular area bounded by captured Chunchon, Hwachon, Inje and Kyon-ni.

Large numbers of enemy prisoners—as yet untabulated—were bagged in the Pungam-Habaejae area southeast of the Hwachon reservoir.

HERDED NORTH

U. S. Marines, soldiers of the U. S. Third Infantry Division, and South Korean troops herded the disorganized Communists northward toward the deep, 12-mile-long Hawachon reservoir while task forces racing north on the flanks of the attack blocked retreat routes to east and west.

The capture of Hwachon closed the road leading around the western end of the reservoir, and the fall of Inje put Allied troops astride the main road net east of the long lake.

One mountain trail around the eastern tip of the reservoir still was open to the retreating Communists, but American troops were closing in on it from the south and west late Sunday. It appeared that it would be only a matter of hours before the last escape lane was closed.

While one column of troops from the U. S. Second Division was seizing Inje, the division's Dutch-American task force rolled into Hyon, a road junction town 10 miles to the southeast.

United Press Staff Correspondent Glenn Stackhouse reported that the Dutch-American advance caught the tail of a large Communist column. Allied artillery and machine guns poured a hail of death into the ranks of the fleeing enemy.

The remnants of three Communist corps — some 30,000 men — were believed trapped south of the reservoir, and other Red units of varying sizes were encircled on the eastern and central fronts. Allied troops also were driving north at the western end of the line, but the greater part of the Reds' western armies appeared to have escaped.

UNIT TRAPPED

Near the center of the line, a Communist force variously described as a regiment or a division was trapped northeast of Chunchon, just below the 38th parallel.

Eighth Army officers said Communist casualties had soared to record heights all along the eastern and central fronts, but no overall reports on the number killed and injured was issued immediately.

The large-scale Chinese surrenders were taken as a hopeful sign by Allied units. Tens of thousands of Korean Communists were captured last Fall, but up to now Chinese prisoners had been few and far between.

5th Big May Fire Hits Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., May 27 (AP)—Birmingham's fifth large fire in eight days caused damage estimated at $100,000 to a downtown business building early Sunday.

Eight fire department companies answered two alarms when flames spread through the upper floor of a large two-story brick building.

The second floor and half of first were occupied by Allison Moving and Storage Company. The other half of the ground floor housed the Empire Leather Company.

The leather company suffered water damage.

Fire Chief Hoyt M. Ayers made the loss estimate. He said the fire apparently started in furniture stored about the middle of the upper story.

Cause of the blaze had not been determined.

The assassination of Abraham Lincoln in Ford's Theater on April 14, 1865, occurred on Good Friday.

the chiefs, who are charged by Congress with being "the principal military advisers to the President, the National Security Council and the Secretary of Defense."

Adm. Sherman made his remarks about the functioning of the Joint Chiefs during an attempt to persuade the House armed services committee that the addition of the commandant of the Marine Corps to the Joint Chiefs, as proposed in Congress, was an unnecessary as increasing the size of the corps by statute to four divisions was "incongruous."

Various officials of the armed services, who have been asked about the portent of Adm. Sherman's remarks on the Joint Chiefs, noted the naval chief was himself against the designs of the Marine Corps exponents in both houses.

However, the same officials expressed either surprise or puzzlement that Adm. Sherman had extended his remarks on the Joint Chiefs to deliver what amounted to a "squawk."

It was also considered significant at the Pentagon that Adm. Sherman, if he was intending to bring into the open a troublesome situation, chose to bring the matter out before the House armed services committee, headed by Rep. Carl Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, and long a strong supporter of the Navy.

Well along in a statement on a Marine Corps bill Adm. Sherman had observed:

DISADVANTAGES

"Partly because the membership of the Joint Chiefs of Staff includes four officers, there is an increasing tendency to have them represented by their chairman and to have their military advice passed through intermediaries. This tendency," he said, "has obvious disadvantages to all concerned."

Inquiry among the three services discloses the Joint Chiefs, under the chairmanship system, have begun to feel "cut off."

Under present procedure all decisions or major "papers" of the Joint Chiefs are given to Gen. Bradley who in turn hands them over to Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall, who, as a cabinet member, delivers the views of the chiefs to the National Security Council and the President.

It is felt that in this process the fine points, the compromises, the nuances and "the give-and-take" that went into a "unanimous paper" of the Joint Chiefs is lost and that higher boards such as the Security Council should have the benefit of the thinking that went into the final recommendation on a matter that might affect not only the services as entities but the national security.

ACCESS TO PRESIDENT

In contrast to the pre-unification system when there were only two chiefs and two secretaries, those of the Navy and War Department, it is pointed out now only on relatively informal occasions do the chiefs or the civilian heads of the services have access to the President. When Gen. Marshall calls a military adviser to meetings of the Security Council, it has been noted, it is always Gen. Bradley.

Such a process, some Pentagon officials fear, leads to "too much synthesizing" of views.

Not only does Gen. Bradley see the Secretary of Defense daily, but as official military "briefer" of the President and in the frequent company of Gen. Marshall on White House visits Gen. Bradley speaks for all the Chiefs.

This, it is held—while no violation of the National Security Act which gives the Joint Chiefs chairman a pre-eminent role—conceivably leads to an invisibly "flavored" picture of any given situation because both Gen. Marshall, despite his "civilian" role, and Gen. Bradley are both Army men.

REFORMS IN ORDER

Although there was no comment from any of the Joint Chiefs on this question, there is understood to be a general feeling some reforms are in order.

Alone, some of the Joint Chiefs are known to be harried by the enormous weight of the responsibilities created by being the head of a branch of the armed services while devoting so much time to the Joint Chiefs.

Prior to the outbreak of fighting in Korea the Joint Chiefs met once a week. Now it is common for there to be three meetings and during especially critical times there might be five meetings a week. A "medium-sized" meeting normally lasts all afternoon, while on other days the Chiefs go into session in their closely guarded precincts of the Pentagon for several hours in the forenoon and then continue throughout the afternoon.

NO BRADLEY CRITICISM

Although the whole Joint Chiefs situation is a matter of concern among the services there is to be found no criticism of Gen. Bradley. Rather, it is said that a plaguing procedure has grown up which even those who embrace the spirit of unification and civilian control think deprives high officials of the fullest advice possible and tends to lower in stature not only the chiefs of the services but the secretaries of the Army, Navy and Air Force.

M'ARTHUR

on MacArthur's dismissal to have been on the whole beneficial. He said it had brought public attention to the Far East policy problem and "ought to be continued."

There is considerable difference of opinion among the 26 committee members on the point of keeping the inquiry, now past its 19th day, going. Sen. Richard Russell, of Georgia, the Committee chairman, said that members of the investigating group have "asked that about 100 witnesses be heard."

Others have expressed the opinion that the investigation may already have developed most of the information it is going to uncover. They have talked about bringing it to an end shortly after Dean Acheson, Secretary of State, is heard.

Presumably, the Secretary, one of the most controversial figures involved, will follow members of the Joint Chiefs to the witness chair. Of the latter, Vandenberg and Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, Chief of Naval Operations, remain to be heard.

Sen. Lester C. Hunt, Democrat of Wyoming, questioned Sunday whether the inquiry was working toward any specific goal. "So far, we have not even formally decided what we're trying to do," he told a reporter.

The Wyoming member of the committee said that unlike most Congressional investigations, this one had no formal directive or resolution requiring a report, recommendations or anything specific.

Russell expressed the hope, however, that the joint committee would produce something definite in the way of a report, but conceded he would not be surprised if there were not one, but "three different reports."

Senator Styles Bridges, Republican of New Hampshire, who has been a severe critic of administration handling of MacArthur's relief from command, commented, meanwhile, that Marshall and Bradley had failed to tell the investigators just what the U. S. objective in Korea is.

Sen. William F. Knowland, Republican of California, told the same radio audience that MacArthur had tried to attain a "free, united and non-Communist Korea" but had been handicapped by a lack of "precise" directives from the United Nations. Sen. Joseph C. O'Mahoney, Democrat of Wyoming, replied that the United Nations appeared to be having as much difficulty in agreeing on a Korea policy as "we have in the Senate."

WELCOME

those who consider "that force is more than ever indispensable for safeguarding the West."

Gen. Juin, Gen. Thomas T. Handy, commander of United States forces in Europe, and Gen. Eddy all participated in the welcome of the Fourth Division, which received its training at Ft. Benning, Ga.

This division, Gen. Handy told his men, is a guarantee to the German people and the German government they have the support of the United States and that they can rebuild a peaceful and democratic Germany without interference from the East.

"One of the greatest deterrents to Soviet and satellite aggression in Western Europe is the presence of American troops in Germany," Gen. Handy declared.

The Fourth Division's movement to Germany will be completed early next month. It is the first of four American divisions to arrive in Germany. These divisions will bring the strength of the Seventh Army up to the equivalent of six divisions by the end of this critical year.

OTHERS TO FOLLOW

The Second Armored Division and two National Guard Infantry divisions are to follow.

In the opinion of American commanders the period between now and September is a critical one, in which the West will learn whether the Russians will allow it to complete reinforcements for the defense of Europe.

The transport "Gen. Alexander M. Patch," bearing the vanguard of the Fourth Division, came alongside the quai at 2 p. m. On its way to the dock it was welcomed by fireboats of the port, which played their hoses into the air in a brave imitation of those in New York harbor. It was watched by a miscellaneous crowd of Germans, including two young women in tight skirts and with bright blond hair who seemed to be looking for someone of something aboard the transport.

As the Gen. Patch tied up at the quai, the Swedish liner Anna Salen steamed out of the harbor bound for Canada and laden with refugees and German emigrants.

The British, who have three full divisions in Germany and another preparing to come, and the West government of federal Germany, which must find millions of marks to pay the extra occupation costs of Allied reinforcements, were not represented at the elaborate ceremony marking the arrival of the first part of the Fourth Division.

This Division's troops, save for officers, and noncommissioned officers cadres, are mostly youngsters swept into the Army by Selective Service. They include a high percentage of men with college training, and Maj. Gen. Harlan N. Hartness, their commander, said their morale was "exceptional."

Physically they appeared in good shape, although they will be sharper in bearing once they have been through the mill at the Seventh Army training areas, where they will complete their combat preparations.

Gen. Hartness estimated that between 10 and 12 percent of the enlisted men and noncoms saw service in the last war and that the percentage is higher among the officers.

To the first enlisted man off the transport, Pvt. Edwin Sternberg of Richmond, Va., the arrival in Germany was of special significance.

Born in Breslau, then in East Germany and now in Poland, Pvt. Sternberg, who is 26, spent the war years in Oranienburg concentration camp. He went to the United States at the war's end and married there.

His comment was, "well I'm sort of anxious to see how Germany looks now."

Pvt. Sternberg did not seem to bear any special animosity toward Germany or the Germans.

"It's a job we all have to do," he said, referring to the defense of Germany.

The troops left Bremerhaven Sunday night for the Fourth Division's assembly at Sandhofen, Mannheim.

Key-Making Ruled Out As Prison Study Course

RICHMOND, Va., May 27—(AP)—Virginia State Penitentiary officials like the idea of inmates preparing for the future by going to school. And they encourage the men to study such subjects as electrical engineering, garment designing, hotel management and music.

One prisoner asked for a course in key-making.

Request rejected.

AUSTRIA

the record of the present Peoples Party-Socialist coalition government. The results indicated that those Breitner supporters who voted for anyone voted in larger numbers for Koerner.

A total of 4,365,127 votes were cast Sunday, or 96 per cent of those eligible. Of these 188,031 were invalid. Koerner received 2,172,806 votes, and Gleissner 2,004,290.

The result of the election is likely to have a profound effect on Austrian politics, and particularly on the policies of the Peoples Party. Its leaders had blamed the failure of their candidate to win outright three weeks ago on the alleged resentment by their supporters of the concessions they had been forced to make for the sake of a coalition to the Socialists. This excuse seems to have been proved invalid. Their attempt to frighten the voters into a conclusion that the choice was "between a free and a Red Austria," which is believed to have been largely responsible for their success in the general elections of 1949, has failed to convince the second time. It is believed Sunday's result, therefore, will lead to soul searchings among the party leadership and perhaps to a general house cleaning in view of recent charges of corruption against some of their former ministers and supporters. To lose the election, after endangering the coalition by their charges against their Socialist partner in it, is certain to prove embarrassing.

BATTALION

the Gloucester men who fought free—was on hand with several of his men to see what could be done to identify the dead.

He was Second Lt. Dennis Whatmore, a platoon leader of the vanished battalion.

Sunday, he walked over the same hills again looking for the bodies of his comrades.

Nearly 40 were reported unburied on one of the remote hills.

Almost all found Sunday were in a shallow grave where the Chinese had placed them when they occupied the British position.

Wherever the lieutenant walked and stopped there was the smell of dead and the buzzing of black flies. The graves were very shallow.

DEBRIS OF BATTLE

Scattered about from hill to hill was the debris of the battle:

Empty Bren gun clips, empty wooden boxes that once held hand grenades—there were 11 of these in front of one British foxhole.

Here and there were the torn and sodden letters of the dead from their loved ones at home.

"My own darling husband"—one would read. Another would say, "Dear Tom, we haven't heard from you."

Some were birthday cards. There were photographs of friends in the service and sometimes of a young woman with a child.

Most of these men were reservists—men who served in World War II, married afterward when they were released and then were recalled to fight half-a-world away.

Down in the valley, among the wrecked trucks, some of the British soldiers with the lieutenant had found a rain-warped cricket bat. They were "bowling" little rocks to the batsman, who obliged with a series of "strokes."

"Frightful thing about those chaps, wasn't it?" one of them said, "I had a lot of friends there."

At the time of the French Revolution the jeweled mirror of Queen Marie de Medici was valued at $30,000.

Wrestling's Golden Hold

Up in Baltimore a few months ago, Ed (Strangler) Lewis, then breaking in as national commissioner of wrestling, worked up a hassel about the old Grecian national pastime. Ought to clean it up, make it legit, give it some character, Strangler bawled, charmed by the sound of his new and authoritative voice.

Wrestling was paying him $25,000 a year for duties not clearly identified. It being any commissioner's God-given prerogative to pop off, Strangler must have felt that he had a pop coming. His burden was weighing heavily and righteousness was the reaction.

BISHER

There followed a long and strange silence from the Commissioner who went about his business in a manner that would drive the Happy Chandler-type commissioner nuts. It feeds on headlines and lineage. Strangler had been so close to the game that he didn't realize wrestling needs a commissioner like Kefauver needs a racing wire. He was supposed to take his $25,000 and keep his big mouth shut.

The kind of business wrestling was doing, it needed nothing but television, which it was just beginning to get. Saturday night, in Municipal Auditorium, 5,000 excited patrons assured wrestling that it gave them what they wanted. They rocked the beams from ceiling to the concrete floor in noisy testimonial to the sport that brought them such terroristic figures as Argentina Rocca, Kola Kwariana, Tarzan White, wicked Lou Plummer and next week will bring them the Great Mr. Moto.

This was not just any audience. Aboard were the Mayor of the city, at least two doctors of philosophy, six disc jockeys, four millionaires and numerous physical education instructors doing lab work observing Rocca's spectacular muscular twitches. Where Eugene Ormandy has conducted, where Kirsten Flagstad has sung, where Jose Iturbi has played, St. Vitus danced in a roped-off square, wearing less than the average strip-teaser.

Baer Could Kick Himself

If you were a late arrival, you could hear the frenzied shrieks and rabid yelps of the mob that ran to standing room only. You entered the building and walked on a carpet of peanut husks and bottle caps down into the darkened interior through the snake pit of activity and through the fringe of the only light burning on the main floor, the flood light above the ring.

Gene Stanlee, trading as Mr. America, was fiercely mistreating an aged gentleman old enough to be his grandpere. It was Kwariana, a Russian who wears (out of the ring) horn-rimmed cheaters that give him the owlish appearance of a pawnbroker.

Back in the wings, Referee Max Baer, who still kicks himself for throwing away the world's heavyweight boxing title after using it only a year, was serenading a group of visitors on the sorrows of separation from family life.

"I been lucky as a pig," said the playboy. "Seventeen years since I was champ, and it's still making money for me. I could kick myself in the pants for letting Jim Braddock beat me. But, I probably wouldn't a-been as happy. I wouldn't a-had a fine wife and three kids. I probably would a-been beat to a pulp fighting too long.

"Know what? I heard for sure in New York this week that Joe Louis ain't got a dime. He lost as much as $5,000 a day betting on his golf game. Me, I got dough. I'm fixed. I took in $800 just for my cut in Miami Friday night.

"If I had it to do all over again? Well, I'd make it so I'd bring fewer heartaches to my loved ones . . . knowing what I know now. Otherwise, I'd do it just like I did. . . . Lookit that big star up there. Just think, I'm standing here looking at it and so's my family in California. Gee, you miss 'em."

Nature Boy With an Accent

Inside a close dressing room was the magnificent Rocca, Antonino Rocca. The "Argentina" is a nickname, like we call a guy from Texas "Tex," or from Arkansas "Arky."

Rocca is Italian, migrated from Italy to join three older brothers in Argentina. Now the whole Rocca family is Argentine by naturalization. Rocca played rugby at University of Buenos Aires, and kicked himself into pro wrestling. A fellow named Charley Johnson brought him to the United States two years ago, and he instantly became a barefooted sensation, with an assist from television.

He wrestles with his feet as handily as his mittens. He writhes like a snake, rolls and dances about the ring as if he's slightly touched in the cerebellum, stands on his hands, grabs his opponent's neck with his feet and flips him about the ring.

His face is as handsomely chiseled as a Shakespearean actor, featuring a well-bridged nose. And he has that distant stare of the movie heroes when films were silent. He's a boon to the feminine trade, Nature Boy with an accent.

When Strangler Lewis asked for character, he got it, plural and upper case. Wrestling lives on characters these days. They're filling the industry's teeth with gold.

COLLEGE CORNER

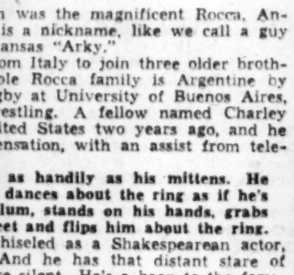

Bulldog Center Pair To 'Study' at Jesup

By EDWIN POPE

Georgia's leading center-student will work with Georgia's master center-teacher this Summer.

Burly Hurley Jones, first-string offensive Bulldog pivotman, will "study" under Quinton Lumpkin at the senior Jones' lumber camp in Jesup. Lumpkin, 1938 All-Southeastern center at Georgia, resigned from the Georgia coaching staff to enter business with Hurley's father.

Lumpkin, who at 34 still was able to outmaneuver most of his line proteges at Athens, rejected pro offers to coach. In '38, he was first draft choice of the Washington Redskins.

Quinton Lumpkin — Hurley Jones

Jones, 6-3, 193, just turned 20, probably is Georgia's top line tyro. Standout end-center-halfback at Jesup's Wayne County High, he went on to star in the North-South All-Star game of 1949, then made All-American junior college as a Georgia Military College center in 1951. In '50, his first University year, he was ineligible for the freshmen as a junior college transfer and ineligible for varsity, not being a junior college graduate.

So he just practiced.

Hurley ran as first offensive center during the Spring. To top it, he recently was honored for being in the upper five percent of the freshman class.

Coach Wallace Butts, long noted as a passing coach but burdened with air troubles the past few years, plans an all-dangerous throwing backfield for Fall. It will include three boys who are T-quarterbacks or former T-quarterbacks: Zeke Bratkowski at quarter, Fred Bilyeu at full, Mal Cook at left half and southpaw-slinger Lauren Hargrove at right half. . . . Hargrove, who toiled in a Fitzgerald tobacco warehouse last Summer, this Summer will work at his brother's filling station there. . . . Marion Campbell, Georgia's great senior tackle, can go farther than any Bulldog player. His arm is longer than that of Fleas (Clegg) Stark, fabled Georgia waterboy. . . . Ex-Bulldog Joe Geri, honored over the Winter as the athlete who did the most to publicize Pittsburgh during the year, already has returned to playing shape. The Steeler ace hits around 195 after daily workouts with fellow pros Charley Trippi, Johnny Rauch and Floyd (Breezy) Reid on the Georgia field.

Tech Athletes Given Awards

Several Georgia Tech athletes were among ROTC cadets receiving awards on Honors Day at the institution.

Included were Powell Sheffer, football and baseball, who received the infantry medal; Herb Bradshaw, baseball, the saber of the Reserve Officers' Association of Atlanta; John Hunsinger, football, an ANAK medal, and Benny Register, basketball, a McGuire medal.

Crackers Bow Twice To Chicks, 10-5, 6-2

Chicks Win 1st Twin Bill; Atlanta Plays Lookouts Tonight

By JESSE OUTLAR

Luke Appling has insisted all along that his Memphis Chicks are just about as good as any Southern Association team. And Sunday afternoon it looked like Luke was right.

A paying turnout of 4,217 shouted approval as the Chicks whacked the Atlanta Crackers 10-5, 6-2.

Snapping out of a four-game losing streak, the Chicks exploded for 22 total bases, including seven of the extra-sack variety in the opener. A pair of homers off gopher-baller Al Henencheck paved the way for Tom Hurd in the short affair.

Hurd, duplicating his six-hitter of a week ago, controlled the Crackers with six scattered safeties. Reliefer Andy Elko matched his brilliance, allowing only two blows after rescuing Henencheck with none out in the second. Of course, those homers by Dixie Upright and Joe Frazier had already tagged Henencheck with his third setback.

The dual success, first of the season for Memphis, gave the Chicks an even split in the four-game argument. While Luke and his men relaxed, the Crackers hustled off for Chattanooga, where they launch a five-game series Monday night.

Al Kozar was the heavy sticker for Memphis in the first tilt. He slammed a homer, double and single to lead the 12-hit assault against loser Elmer Toth, Elko and Kirby Higbe.

Atlanta struck flutter-baller Frank Biscan for an equal number of licks, but couldn't produce when it counted even with five doubles.

Country Brown started the long-distance barrage with a two-baser in the first inning and breezed over as Al Aucoin delivered a single.

But there were few pleasant moments for the Crackers during the lengthy afternoon. Memphis tuned up on Toth with a run in the third on doubles by Kozar and Alex Grammas. And in the fourth, they had Elmer whistling their tune as four runs romped in.

Ed White's two-bagger in wake of a triple by Don Pinciotti and an error by Walt Linden furnished two runs. Then Bill Higdon

Sweep East To Stay Tilt Behind NY

Indians Fall, 5-2 and 6-4

CLEVELAND, May 27—(AP)—Chicago's White Sox made a clean sweep of their road trip Sunday, registering their 10th and 11th straight victories with a double win off the Cleveland Indians, 5-2 and 6-4. That added up to four in a row off the Indians, after seven wins from the four Eastern clubs. The double bill, interrupted frequently by showers, ran more than seven hours.

In every game during that sweep, the Chicagoans scored at least five runs.

Joe Dobson won his fourth victory in the first game, allowing seven hits. Howie Judson got credit for his first, although he had to have help from Marv Rotblatt in the seventh.

Al Zarilla was the batting star of the day. He drove in four runs in the second game on a double, a single and a homer, the latter accounting for the Sox' final and deciding pair of runs in the seventh.

CHICAGO, May 27—(INS). Mayor Martin H. Kennelly of Chicago announced Sunday night that he will proclaim tomorrow "Chicago White Sox Day" in honor of the baseball club's 11-game winning streak.

Zarilla also drove in the Chicagoans' final pair of runs in the first game, his double capping a three-run sixth inning which broke a tie and drove Early Wynn from the mound.

Steve Gromek was the loser in the second contest.

RICHARDS AND HIS CHISOX

Club's Base Thieves Unnerve Opposition

(This is the first of two stories on the amazing Chicago White Sox and the man who made them that way—Paul Richards.)

By KEN OPSTEIN

CHICAGO, May 27—(INS)—The baseball manager who does the miraculous immediately and takes only a little longer to do the impossible, Paul Richards, was on his way home Sunday night with his incredible Chicago White Sox.

PAUL RICHARDS

The freshman boss of the once chronic losers of the Windy City has his club in second place in the American League.

There is pennant talk around Chicago's South Side for the first time since the Black Sox days of 1919.

Baseball's wise old men will tell you, however, that May is no time for such chatter and that the coming months will separate the kings from the cabbages. But these same graybeards admit that Richards looked like anything but a cabbage head when he led the White Sox through their first undefeated Eastern tour in the 50-year history of the club.

The hatchet man from Waxahachie, Texas, then moved into Cleveland with his souped-up Sox and won three more games to extend the Chicago winning streak to 11 straight.

Richards' success is directly attributable to his inauguration of a new trend in current baseball or, if you prefer, the reviving of an old one—the art of base stealing.

Nearly all teams have sought the long ball hitter in recent years, but Richards traded home run slugger Gus Zernial to the Philadelphia Athletics. Richards claimed:

"Comiskey Park is too big a place to be trying for homers. I want line drive hitters and fellows that can run."

The one-time major league catcher has created that type of a club and has unnerved the entire league with it. Chicago players are scoring what some experts call "cheap runs" but these runs count in the totals as much as any other kind.

The White Sox are stealing bases. They are stretching singles into doubles and doubles into triples.

Jim Busby, Orestes Minoso and Chico Carrasquel rank one-two-three in stolen bases. The club has no superior at the moment in doubles and triples.

Richards' emphasis on base stealing has given the jitters to opposing pitchers and catchers. The receivers are afraid to call for anything but a fast ball when the White Sox have men on base because there may be a necessity to throw to second or third. The result is that the White Sox are getting a steady diet of fast balls and they have been ready for them.

What happens if the other clubs devise a defense for Richards' base pirates? The square-jawed Chicago manager says:

"We'll try something else."

Redhot Red Sox Rip Nats Twice

BOSTON, May 27—(AP)—Boston's blistering hot Red Sox Sunday completed a slaughter of the Washington Senators by sweeping a double-header, 9-3 and 7-1, to extend their winning streak to seven games. The Sockers' nightcap tallies resulted from a grand-slam homer by Ted Williams and a three-run four-bagger by Bobby Doerr, both in the third inning.

A's Snap Yank Streak in Split

NEW YORK, May 27—(AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics snapped New York's seven-game winning streak Sunday by beating the Yanks, 7-4, in the second half of a rain-swept double-header. The Yanks won the opener, 9-0, behind Frank Shea.

The split cut the Yanks' lead to one game over the red-hot Chicago White Sox.

Shea hit a three-run homer as he notched his second win. Phil Rizzuto also parked one.

Bobby Shantz was credited with the victory in the nightcap. Reliever Bob Hooper came on to stifle a Yankee rally in the seventh inning.

Joe DiMaggio went hitless in both games, stretching his string of failures to 14 times at bat.

Alf Holmberg Snaps Wilt's Mark in Mile

READING, Penn., May 27. (AP)—Alf Holmberg, University of Tennessee sophomore, ended Fred Wilt's two-year reign Sunday when the 22-year-old Swedish lad won the third running of the Gerry Karver Mile.

Alternating with Wilt in setting the pace after the first half-mile the orange-clad miler broke the tape a stride in front of the fast-closing Wilt. Holmberg was clocked in 4:11, erasing the former standard of 4:11.7, set last year by Wilt.

Maglie Blanks Phils

Cards Win, Musial Hits 2 Homers

Sal Captures 7th Straight

PHILADELPHIA, May 27 (AP)—Sal Maglie, the New York Giants' brilliant right-hander, spun a nifty two-hitter Sunday to give the Giants their second 2-0 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies in two days. The victory ran Maglie's personal winning streak to seven games.

Maglie, onetime Mexican League jumper who achieved one of baseball's more remarkable comebacks last season, was master of the Phils' hitters from start to finish. Only four batters reached base against him, two on singles, one on a walk and one on a boot by shortstop Alvin Dark.

The Phils' Russ Meyer was nearly as good—but not quite. He matched Maglie pitch-for-pitch until the eighth when Bobby Thomson poked a lead-off double just inside the left field foul line.

Maglie helped his own cause by successfully bunting Thomson to third with the count two strikes against him. Thomson scored as Eddie Stanky punched a single past the shortstop.

The Giants added a cushion run after two were out in the ninth. Wes Westrum drew the second of Meyer's three walks and lumbered all the way home on a double off the left field wall by Dark.

Maglie, who never has lost to the Phils, pushed his seasonal mark to seven victories and two defeats, his triumphs coming in a row after two early-season setbacks.

AA Nines Open Meet Here Today

O'Keefe's Irish battle Decatur and Rome will meet Murphy as the Northern Division of the State Class AA baseball tournament opens Monday afternoon at Ponce de Leon Park.

O'Keefe, Atlanta's No. 1 team, will play Region 4-AA's No. 2 team, Decatur, beginning at 2 p. m. Four AA champ Rome and Murphy will follow at 4 p. m.

The two winners and the two losers will be paired on Tuesday. The North winner will face the winner of the Southern division in which Lanier has a one-game advantage over Richmond Academy.

Hank Langston will send either Jimmy Nisewonger or Frank Tippett against Decatur. Jim Patton, Decatur mentor, is wavering between David Redford and Al Cogbill, the only left-hander in the play-off. Boots Payne will probably start Ray Jones, saving Colvin Heist for the other tift. Either Glenn Johnson (7-1) or Harlan Niblett will perform for Rome's Dick McPhee.

McCauley Pigeon Wins 385-Miler

Sgt. A. O. McCauley's pigeon won the 385-mile race from Henderson, N. C., to Atlanta Sunday. The bird was clocked at 664.62 yards per minute despite rain and headwinds.

Bunched closely at second, third and fourth were Tommy Peacock's pigeon, 557.19 ypm., Billy Wilson's, 556.57; and Cecil Bradley's, 554.34.

Next week's race will be a 500-miler from Portsmouth, Va., to Atlanta.

Saturday Track Carnival To Be Class-Heavy Event

By BERT PRATHER

Georgia's first annual AAU track and field championships scheduled Saturday at Grant Field, is not expected to draw a bulging field but there will be plenty of class in each event.

In the senior division, Frank Albertson, who ran a 4:17.4 mile in winning the SEC-Southern mile title Saturday night at Raleigh, N. C., should set up a record here which may stand for some time. Frank is a former Druid Hills High star who now carries the colors of University of Tennessee.

Buddy Fowlkes, Georgia Tech's great all-around star, will be candidate for automatic records in the 100, 220 and broad jump. The former National AAU indoor broad jump champ has been favoring a lame leg of late but may try to gather in enough points to carry off the high-point trophy in the senior division.

Red Smith of Tech, a third-place finisher in Saturday's interconference meet, will have a battle on his hands in the two-mile run. Three crack two-milers from Camp Gordon and Charles Waites from University of Tennessee, will be in there battling the ole redhead in the eight-lap grind. Regardless of the winner, the time is bound to be well under 10:00.

Jim Shiver of Tech will be favored in both hurdles, with Lonnie O'Quinn, Georgia ace, given a chance to upset him in the highs. Lonnie will be a top favorite in the high jump if Bob Reeder of Mercer does not enter.

Bill Paul, who has done 13 feet in the pole vault, and Tech teammate Dick Ralston are the top men entered in this event.

Tech's freshmen crew and Emory will be out to upset the Tech varsity in the mile relay, while Georgia's Guy Fleming and Tech's Bobo Glover should duel in the half unless Albertson decides to take in this one, too.

Another outstanding battle should come in the quarter where Jacket Bailey Dixon will attempt to outfoot Georgia's pride, Ben Sutton. Both are capable of :49.0.

Georgia's outstanding high school and prep stars are favored to set up better-than-average marks in the junior division. The juniors run standard Georgia high school events, which means an 880 relay instead of the mile and 180-yard low hurdles instead of the 220, as required in the senior division.

CRACKERS

strolled and stole both second and third, but such effort wasn't necessary. Kozar, a right-handed batter, promptly unloaded his fourth circuit sock over the right field fence.

Elko saved his best pitches for the nightcap, for he was bumped for a score in the fifth and two more in the sixth after Toth was lifted.

Finally in the seventh the Crackers caught up with Biscan and netted three worthless runs. Walt Linden's second double, Ertman's single, an error by Jim Baumer and two outfield flies did the damage.

Memphis slapped Higbe for their final two runs in the eighth.

After a brief break, the Chicks went right to work on Henencheck in the first inning of the second game.

With one down, Baumer singled and Upright planted his seventh homer in the left-center seats. Henencheck erased White and then served his seventh home run special to Joe Frazier. Joe rammed a 400-footer over the right-center signs and received $200 for his effort from a local laundry firm.

That was all the encouragement that Hurd, a frail 140-pounder, needed to register his third victory and his second over Atlanta.

However, Memphis wasn't taking any chances and scored twice in the second. Henencheck was dismissed after Higdon and Kozar singled, but Grammas greeted Elko with a two-run one-baser.

Thereafter, Elko had little trouble as he wasted some fine relief work. He retired eight batters in order before conking Grammas and yielding a scoring double to Baumer in the fifth.

No further noise was heard from the Crackers after the third, for Hurd spaced three harmless singles the rest of the way.

Manager Dixie Walker has honored southpaws Don Liddle (0-1) and Walt Nothe (1-0) with starting assignments in Monday's double-header in Chattanooga.

If they finish the games, they'll join a select group of Cracker hurlers. Only 16 complete games have been pitched in 43 tilts this season.

Tide Leads Plainsmen's All-Foe Vote

AUBURN, Ala., May 27—Alabama's baseball team dominated Auburn's 1951 all-opponents baseball team, placing six on the 14-man squad.

At least one player was selected from every conference team Auburn played.

Alabama's third baseman, George Howell, and LSU's catcher, Gene Murphy, gained more votes from the Auburn lettermen than any other members, being almost unanimous choices.

Alabama placed: first base, Mike Mizerany; second base, Leon Adair; third base, George Howell; catcher, Tony Napoli, and pitchers, Al Worthington and Bill Dunn.

The two selections besides Murphy for LSU were outfielders George Roussos and Bob Meador.

Georgia Tech placed utility infielder Chappell Rhino, and utility outfielder Bob McCoy. Florida's selection was outfielder Jack Rushing, while Georgia placed shortstop Jim Umbricht and Tulane pitcher Ace Norris.

SOUTHERN ROUNDUP

Peb Johnson Nabs Barons for Split

By BILL FERGUSON
United Press Sports Writer

Little Rock's Milo Johnson came off the sick list Sunday just in time to tame the wild and wooly Birmingham Barons and save an otherwise humiliating day for the league-leading Travelers.

After the Barons had murdered Little Rock in the opener, 20-5, the slender righthander came on with a nifty three-hitter to top Birmingham, 5-2.

Birmingham shelled four Trav hurlers for 24 hits in the opener, while Jim Wallace coasted to his fifth victory of the year, giving out 14 safeties.

But the Barons were more than quiet when Milo came on. Birmingham's three hits consisted of a bunt single, a hopper over third baseman Jack Gerin's head and a Texas league double to right field. The victory was No. 7 for Trav side-armer against one setback.

The split allowed the Travs to extend their Southern Association lead back to four games while the Barons pulled to within one-half game of second place.

Nashville's Jack Harshman hit his 13th and 14th homers of the season and drove in eight runs but the Vols still could manage no more than a twin-bill split with New Orleans.

Vol Paul Schneider, making his first start of the year, won the free-slugging opener, 10-7, although he needed help from Al Porto in the eighth.

Pel Lee Anthony scattered eight hits to top the Vols in the closer, 6-4. A grand-slam homer by Harshman accounted for all of Nashville's runs.

Chattanooga and Mobile also divided their double-take with the cellar-dwelling Bears sliding by in the first game, 7-6.

In the second contest, called at the end of five innings because of darkness, the Lookouts found two Mobile pitchers for eight hits and a 7-5 decision.

Cary Middlecoff Wins Colonial Golf Tourney

By ED FITE

FORT WORTH, Tex., May 27—(UP)—Lanky Cary Middlecoff, former dentist from Memphis, Tenn., coasted to the championship of the sixth annual Colonial National Invitation golf tournament Sunday with a two-over-par 282 as his challengers folded under pressure.

Cary Middlecoff

The 30-year-old Middlecoff scrambled to a three-over-par 35-38—73 in the final 18 but that was good enough to let him pick up the first-prize money of $3,000. His 282 was the first over-par winning total in the tournament's history.

Ed (Porky) Oliver of Seattle, Byron Nelson of Roanoke, Texas, and the home-town favorite, little Ben Hogan, were chasing Middlecoff closely as they opened the final round, but when it was all over the second place was owned by young Jack Burke, Jr., of Houston, who came blazing through with a 34-33—67, three under par and a total of 283.

Another darkhorse came on to win third place—Lloyd Mangrum, of Chicago, who posted a 34-36—70 for a 284 total.

Middlecoff, a 6-foot, 2-inch native of Halls, Tenn., hadn't won a tournament since the Lakewood Open in January, but he was in such fine position Sunday that he could afford to three-putt the final hole and still win. He did exactly that.

Oliver, Hogan and Nelson all finished in a tie for fourth place at 285. Oliver blew himself to a 39-36—75, Hogan had 34-38—72, and Nelson took 39-34—73.

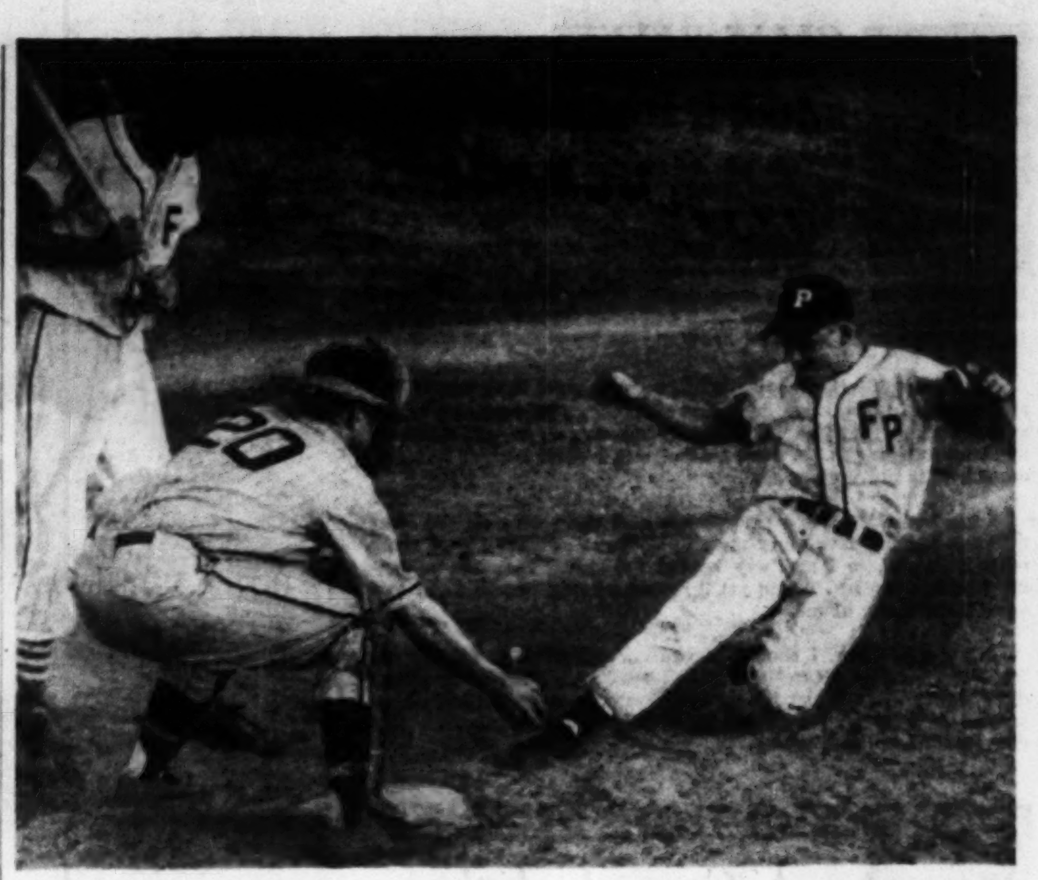

CRACKER DIARY

Chisox Fans Keeping Tab On Ol' Luke

MEMPHIS, Tenn., May 27—Chicago White Sox fans are following Luke Appling's managerial career with keen interest. The president of the Chisox Fan Club recently wrote Dave Bloom, Commerical-Appeal baseball writer, that they are pulling for their old favorite and are hoping the Chicks will soon be in the first division.

Appling and Memphis supporters are puzzled over Outfielder Bill Higdon's slump. Last season, Higdon hit a lusty .333 for the Chicks and was one of the loop's most promising rookies. But he hasn't been the same since being beaned in the White Sox camp this Spring and now has an anemic .230 mark.

Kirby Higbe may be called to his Columbia, S. C., home any hour due to his mother's illness. Mrs. Higbe, 57, suffered a stroke Saturday night. . . . Mgr. Dixie Walker was encouraged by the spirit of his club in Saturday's 7-2 victory over the Chicks. Dix believes they resembled last year's club more than at any other time this season. . . . Jack Dittmer looks like a different infielder since shifting to second and is showing improvement in every game.

Mad Scramble Is Foreseen For Top Positions in '500'

By DALE BURGESS

INDIANAPOLIS, May 27—(AP)—One of the maddest scrambles since the Oklahoma land rush was arranged Sunday night for the Indianapolis Motor Speedway Monday morning.

The final qualification period for Wednesday's 500-mile race was rained out Sunday. Six spots remain unfilled in the 33-car starting line-up.

Chief Steward Tommy Milton ordered an additional qualifying period from 9 a. m. to 1 p. m. (EST) Monday.

Eighteen cars were lined up on the concrete apron of the track, but stewards Harry McQuinn of the American Automobile Association told the drivers their relative qualifying positions were not guaranteed for Monday's trial.

In other words, so far as the AAA is concerned, it will be catch-as-catch-can at the starting line Monday.

The only guarantee was that the first trial will be given to Joe James of Van Nuys, Calif., who completed half of the 10-mile test at better than 135 miles an hour before a shower stopped his run Saturday.

Drivers and owners of unqualified cars held an indignation meeting in the garage area. They wanted to take the line-up cars—about $500,000 worth of racing cars—out of the rain and into the garages.

But after learning that their positions weren't guaranteed, they left the cars sitting on the apron under tarpaulins.

The additional six-hour qualifying period will be long enough to give each of the 41 unqualified entries a chance if it doesn't rain.

But their owners and drivers feared another series of showers such as the intermittent rain this week end.

The 27 cars now qualified are not guaranteed starting spots. The line-up will be the 33 fastest cars in the time trials.

One car went out of the running by the crack-up route Sunday morning. Mike Leo Szalai, 40, South Bend, Ind., was taken to Methodist Hospital with serious chest injuries, but the hospital later reported his condition "greatly improved."

Szalai, who races under the name Mike Salay, lost control while trying to pass Johnnie Tolan of Denver on the southwest turn. The car skidded 150 feet, hit the south wall, bounced off and slid another 100 feet. The car, the Szalai Special, was badly damaged.

Yankees Sign Kramer, Ship Tom Morgan

NEW YORK, May 27—(AP)—Jack Kramer, 33-year-old righthanded pitcher, Sunday was signed by the New York Yankees.

To make a place for him on the roster, the champions released Tom Morgan, rookie righthander, to Kansas City on 24-hour recall option.

Kramer, former star with the St. Louis Browns and Boston Red Sox, recently received his unconditional release from the New York Giants.

Calvert Hurls No-Hit Game For Seattle

SEATTLE, May 27—(AP)—Paul Calvert, bespectacled right hander, hurled the first no-hit, no-run game of the Pacific Coast League season Sunday as the Seattle Rainiers took over first place with a 4-0 victory over Sacramento.

Calvert, making his first start since he was acquired from the Detroit Tigers, was in complete command all the way. Only 30 Sacramento batters faced him, with the last 11 going down in order.

Maxim Ends Drills 14-5 Underdog

CHICAGO, May 27—(UP)—Light heavyweight champion Joey Maxim will try to wrest the heavyweight crown from Ezzard Charles at Chicago Stadium Wednesday night in the feature bout on this week's schedule.

As swarthy, black-haired Maxim finished his boxing preparations at the Catholic Youth gymnasium Sunday, he was a 14-5 underdog in the betting.

Dusky Charles, grooming for his eighth defense of the title, planned to complete his sparring at the Midwest gymnasium Monday.

Charles of Cincinnati was favored over the Cleveland Italian for three rasons: (1) he is rated the harder puncher, (2) he outpointed Maxim in three bouts before either became champion, and (3) he has been fighting more regularly than Joey.

Maxim's last bout was in December, when he knocked out Dave Whitlock at San Francisco. Charles' last scrap was in March, when he retained his title on a 15-round decision over Jersey Joe Walcott at Detroit.

Although Ezzard and Joey are kings of separate divisions, there'll be little difference in their weights for Wednesday's 15-rounder. Charles will scale about 183 pounds; Maxim, about 180. And each is 29 years old, according to the record book.

Because of television, the gate for Chicago's fifth heavyweight title fight probably will not exceed $125,000. The crowd will approximate 13,000. However, the International Boxing Club has sold the TV-radio rights for $100,000. Charles will receive 40 percent of that $100,000 and 40 of the net gate. Maxim will get 20 percent of each.

Their bout could affect the destinies of two divisions. Should Charles lose his crown, as did Johnny Bratton and Ike Williams in the past two weeks, his defeat would cause victorious Maxim to give up his own light-heavy (175-pound) championship.

In such case, Maxim would have to defend the heavy title against Charles in a return bout within 90 days; and some sort of elimination would be staged to produce a new light-heavy champ.

Meanwhile, if Maxim loses to Charles Wednesday night, Maxim must fulfill a contract to defend his 175-pound bonnet against Bob Satterfield at Wrigley Field, Chicago, July 2.

Union Tops Bethel After 13 Innings

Chamblee, Tell Sweep Pair; Lunsford Hits Three Homers

Union and Bethel Rebels, members of the Eastern Amateur Baseball League, battered four pitchers for 25 hits and 26 runs but the slugging bee went 13 innings before Union broke loose with a four-run rally to clinch the decision, 15-11, Sunday afternoon.

Union got off to a running start, scoring eight runs in the first three innings. Bethel came through with four in the sixth, three in the seventh and four more in the ninth to deadlock the contest. James Maddox and Lamar Gattis worked on the mound for the winners, while Charley Pickens started for the Rebs but was relieved in the fourth by Herberts. John Richardson, Robert Johnson and Billy Kelly led the winning attack, while R. Pickens and Weldon were the leading sluggers for Bethel.

Chamblee and Tell were double winners in two of the afternoon's two-game battles. Candler Park Vets and Lithonia split the third.

Homer Sims gave up five hits as the North Atlanta Leaguers took the first from Doraville, 7-1. Bubber Hodges gave the same number in the second, an 18-4 romp. Big gun among the Chamblee stickmen were Carl Lunsford, who slammed out a pair of homers in the first and a homer and single in the second.

Hanes Parrott and LeRoy Tarpley carried the load as Tell rambled over Lakewood, 20-4 and 24-3, in the Flint River League. Tarpley was helped out in the second affair by Bobby Kay in the seventh. The losing batsmen collected five hits in each of the two games, while Tell was rapping out 19 and 21.

Mel Thames, Tell's catcher all 15 innings, collected four for four in the first to take batting honors and had three singles in four trips to complete his afternoon. However, Tally had four for five and three for five as a close second placer. Bill Cook had a pair of circuit sweeps in the final. Nettles and Mize were toppers for Lakewood.

An Appraisal by a Neighbor

Earl "Tige" Pickle, a resident of Blakely in Early County, writes a pithy column for The Early County News. Furthermore, he is a county officeholder. He is a solid South Georgian, surely no carpetbagger or scalawag by any demogogic stretch of the definition or the imagination.

In a recent column, Mr. Pickle reports a conversation with an Alabaman. In the course of the talk, the Georgian asked his neighbor "if he knew the answer why Alabama seemed to have better schools and roads, generally speaking, than Georgia."

Here is the Alabaman's reply as quoted by the Early Countian:

"In your state you've got too many counties. Too many courthouse boys to keep up. (This statement sorta hit me where it hurt, as some of you readers might know, the conductor of this column holds a county office, but I didn't bat an eyelash, but let the man keep talking.) Then your governor, whoever he might be, has always got some controversy going which actually is not as important as he tries to make the people think it is, but keeps saying it to take their minds off the real issues like good schools and roads. You folks in Georgia have always got a stink going about the "nigger" or the county unit system or some other sandman-boogey man issue, which your politicians make you voters think is what ought to be looked after first. Consequently you Georgia folks get to thinking, talking and arguing about all this and get your minds off roads and schools. The issue might be important, but they are not as important as whether your children go to a first-class school or whether you ride over a good road. We in Alabama have our differences, sometimes to the point of having a fist fight, something I don't recall Georgians doing, but we always call off the fight long enough to keep asking our governor when he is going to pave our road, or when he is going to improve our school."

"Tige" Pickle makes no comment on the validity of the Alabaman's argument. Certainly, we refuse to concede a superiority to our neighbor in all things.

But on roads and schools and the bones of contention which the out-of-stater mentions the record speaks for itself.

Right now Georgia's legal forces are mobilized to defend an anachronistic affront to democracy, the county unit system. A majority of Georgians voting have already rejected the proposal to extend the system to the general election.

Yet the friends of the unit vote—friends because it is good for them and their purposes—insist on extending it, and now on defending it with the state's money.

A Talmadge paper asked last week, "Where is the money coming from to fight the unit system?"

Where the cash is coming from to defend it is obvious. It's coming from the state treasury, most of it put there by those who are against the county unit system.

How much better it would be for all of us if the state's legal talent and those funds were put to constructive use.

"Tige" Pickle's critical Alabama friend may have something.

Eniwetok Is Ready and Waiting

Announcement by the Atomic Energy Commission and the Defense Department that tests at tiny Eniwetok atoll in the Far Pacific have included experiments with "thermonuclear weapons" doesn't mean much to us laymen until the scientists explain that "thermonuclear" means the H-bomb.

And when they explain that the A-bomb becomes merely the percussion cap which detonates the hydrogen bomb, the significance of what has been going on at Eniwetok grows.

We read further that atomic energy experts estimate the heat at the heart of an A-bomb explosion as 20,000,000 degrees centigrade, or higher than that of the core of the sun. Then they come along to say an H-bomb blast could be from 1,000 to 10,000 times as powerful as an A-bomb explosion.

That gives us a pretty good idea of the kind of hell that is standing by on Eniwetok, ready to go into action in Korea or anywhere else if our Soviet enemy decides to take the risk.

Up to the recent experiments out there, the world had experienced 14 atomic blasts. Of those 14 the United States had set off 13, the 14th being the one which President Truman and our scientists said was touched off inside Russia.

We hope that our 13-to-1 lead still stands, that our supremacy in the development of atomic weapons continues as the one big deterrent to global war. Every thinking person in the world joins with us in the prayer that we never have to use those awful weapons.

The choice is with the enemy. Hints of what is happening at our proving ground in the Pacific is a warning to the bully what to expect if he pushes his aggression.

When and if Joe Stalin knocks the atomic chip off our shoulder, then Eniwetok is our way of saying, "Don't say we didn't tell you!"

Eniwetok is ready—and waiting.

We hope it will bring the world nearer peace!

A Deserved Promotion for an Able Public Servant

We rejoice with his many friends at the appointment by the President of Col. B. L. Robinson to be engineering commissioner for the District of Columbia, but regret to lose so fine and able a citizen and public servant.

Colonel Robinson's contributions to the city and region have been many since coming here about two years ago as division engineer for the South Atlantic Division, Army Engineers. He has been most helpful on the Buford Dam and is one of the project's most enthusiastic supporters. His support for the dam comes primarily from his faith in the future development of the entire area, of which Atlanta is the logical center.

In his new position, Colonel Robinson will be one of the three commissioners who direct the affairs of the nation's capital. It is a deserved promotion and we join in congratulating him and wishing him well.

THE PULSE OF THE PUBLIC

Concerning the Red Cross

The Editors: The American Red Cross suffers from a terrible reputation. You seldom hear anyone outside the newspapers and the Red Cross workers themselves say anything in its favor.

Because of this notoriety I have never given them a cent, though I have never had personal contact with them. There are millions of people like me, I am sure, because they are who I heard it from and, as a result, they must lose untold thousands of dollars from people who would otherwise contribute if they knew for sure their money was really going to the cause professed.

So I believe it is time for the Red Cross to come to its own defense if the charges are untrue, and to expose any corruption in it if it is really there. If there is any, the people will soon correct it. If they have ever publicly denied this reputation, they did a poor job, and it must be done again, more convincingly. PVT. R. C. H.

Atlanta.

Editor's Note: For another serviceman's opinion of the Red Cross we refer R. C. H. to the last paragraph of the Ed Sullivan column on the opposite page.

For Obvious Reasons

The Editors: I read an article in Christian Century which purports to give Gen. George Van Horn Moseley's plan for the massacre of all radicals. It reported that he threatened to "make all massacres in history look like peaceful church parades." I understand General Moseley wrote a letter to The Atlanta Journal Feb. 11, 1949, in which he opposed the teaching of democracy in the public schools as a "perversion of constitutional government." The Atlanta Constitution on Jan. 19, 1951, reported that he said of Emory Burke of the Columbians, Inc., that Burke "is one of the most patriotic boys I've ever known, and he is a martyr."

If these do not represent fairly Gen. George Van Horn Moseley's ideas, I stand ready to apologize. If the above do represent General Moseley's philosophy, I would like to point out that they represent basically the same ideas that cost us so dearly in the Second World War. These are the ideas we were fighting. I will fight these ideas whenever and wherever I find them.

Why did I object to Gen. George Van Horn Moseley's being made guest of honor at the Piedmont College banquet last Thanksgiving? I think the reason is obvious.

I believe a school should exist for a purpose or for purposes. If any part of this purpose is to be the propagation of the doctrine of hate, perhaps it is better that the school should cease to be.

The Armstrong Foundation was found by the Dies Un-American Activities Committee to be a false front for hate propagation. Have we any indication that the leopard has changed his spots? Have we any believable assurance that the Texas Educational Association, founded from the same man's fortune and with the same key personnel, is a benign, martyred Santa Claus?

Demorest. H. E. BOWEN.

An Important Factor

The Editors: The annual Farm Family Achievement Day held here on the College of Agriculture campus Wednesday was probably the most successful one in history, and the newspaper coverage of the event was one of the factors making it a success. All of us who worked on this program want you and the other people on The Constitution staff to know how much we enjoyed the story and photographs by Miss Pat Livingston, and we want you to know, too, how much we appreciated the lead editorial in the May 23 Atlanta Constitution.

It was an inspiration to talk with a number of the farm families here who have become farm owners after having operated for a good many years as tenants, and those to whom we talked were delighted that your newspaper showed so much interest in their activities.

GLADSTONE WILLIAMS

A Commendation For Sen. Tobey

WASHINGTON — Sen. Charles W. Tobey, salty Republican liberal of New Hampshire, deserves the commendation of the country for the move he has made to "ring down the curtain" on the Senate investigation of the MacArthur-Far Eastern policy controversy.

He was prompted to do so by the statement made by Gen. Omar Bradley, head of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, that the disclosure of American "intentions" and "capabilities" which have come out of the hearings are "very harmful" to our national security and may be "inciting Russia to war."

The New Hampshire Republican took a caustic view of the way the inquiry has been long drawn out, with all of the revelations that have been made on vital phases of our foreign policy. Speaking of the joint committee conducting the investigation, he had this to say:

"Here are a lot of men, well-meaning men, with absolutely no military training or gumption or common sense coming in here to pose questions to men whose lifelong service has been in the military and naval establishments and the air force of this country."

Declaring the hearings have taken on a 'political trend," he said it was time to "forget the piddling stuff" and ring down the curtain on the hearings. Tobey was joined by another prominent Republican, Sen. Henry Cabot Lodge of Massachusetts, who said he was ready to co-operate in a move to expedite the investigation.

Dangerous The statement by General Bradley which brought on the move to bring the hearings to an end was to the effect that he considered the testimony "very harmful to our security and our country and our future security to have to pass on to Russia all of our intentions, all of our thoughts, all of our capabilities." He said he would be willing to go before the appropriations committees of Congress and advocate a very large appropriation to buy similar information on Russia.

Despite the close censorship that prevails on matters of military secrecy, the investigating committee has released volumes of testimony dealing with our foreign policy. As General Bradley points out, the Russians have been able to learn from this just how far we may be expected to go in a given direction, what limitations we have imposed on our military plans, and how much we will take from them before demanding a showdown. This is information which no country normally would be willing to give to a potential enemy. It puts us at a definite disadvantage.

Sen. Richard B. Russell of Georgia, chairman of the investigating body, has leaned over backwards in an effort to avoid any charge of partisanship in the conduct of the inquiry. Because of the political aspects of the controversy raised by the President's dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur, he and other Democrats on the committee have sought to bring out all of the evidence that is permissible.

No Whitewash If the committee chairman sought to bring the hearings to a quick close, cutting off some of the other testimony that has been demanded, he would run the risk of being charged by Republicans with trying to whitewash the case. Irresponsible charges to that end have already been voiced, in fact, by Sen. Alexander Wiley of Wisconsin.

Hence the chief responsibility rests with Republican leaders to call a halt to the proceedings. Senators Tobey and Lodge have shown a high degree of patriotism in moving in that direction.

As a matter of fact, there never was any justification for carrying the hearings to the extent they have gone. The testimony of General MacArthur and Secretary of Defense Marshall, with supporting documents from the Joint Chiefs of Staff, should have been sufficient. There never was any mystery about why the President relieved the general of his command.

But unfortunately under our system of government, as General Bradley has reminded, we have to educate 154 million people when a conflict arises over a matter of foreign policy, whereas in Russia only 14 people (the Politburo) have to be consulted in arriving at similar decisions—and maybe only one, Old Joe Stalin.

Open Range Is Disappearing

At least three more Georgia counties vote July 4 on the long-standing, controversial issue of the open range. It is likely, from the petitions which have been filed in Clinch, Camden and Charlton Counties, that the areas in Georgia which still cater to the open range will be still further reduced.

For many years the fence and no-fence question created much bitterness. Efforts to abolish the open range met with heavy resistance and on numerous occasions the "fence" advocates beat down at the polls the attempts to adopt a law which would fence livestock off the highways and out of adjoining property.

Time, however, has wrought what human argument could not. Livestock animals have become far more valuable in dollars and cents than they were a quarter to a half-century or more ago. Scientific methods of farming have effected a revolution in the blood lines and feeding programs. Livestock raisers now are interested in maintaining constant contact with their high-blooded animals and seeing that they have the proper feeding and care which is necessary to get the top dollar at marketing time.

As the result of this change in livestock farming, one county after another in Georgia has seen the value of abolishing the open range.

JOHN MARVIN RAST

"The fruit of the Spirit is love, joy, peace, long suffering, gentleness, faith."—Galatians 5:22.

A headline in the paper runs: "Love held as vital to a baby as food—child can take strains of life if he is secure with parents, group told."

And the story behind the headline is that children can "take" the threat of war, the atomic bomb, and the other realistic worries in life without being emotionally upset if they feel emotionally secure with their parents.

This counsel from one of the nation's authorities on child care, Dr. Benjamin Stock, is heartening.

It challenges us all to see to it that home is more than a place for calories and comforts, that it is primarily a place for nurture of mind and heart in an atmosphere of unquestioned devotion.

DEAR FATHER, WE WOULD learn the secret of acceptable living with Thee and with one another. Complete now what Thou seest lacking in us.

Those Pale Pumpers in Polk

Why do firemen have red engines? With which to fight fires is the obvious answer. But they don't in Cedartown. The fire engines in the Polk County seat are white. A Chattanooga scribe, noting that fact, commented on the pale pumpers and invoked the ire of Mark Waits, editor of The Cedartown Standard, as hereafter indicated: "It seems that back in March one 'damyankee' from Chattanooga 'flew the coop' and took a trip down to Florida. On his way it was Mr. Ochs' privilege to pass through Cedartown. Apparently happy when he returned home, and after probably suffering from a bad case of gout, the man became prolific in a column entitled 'Looking Sideways' and gave the reading public a 'sideways' view of his trip. One paragraph is of especial importance to Cedartown and we pass it along for your amusement:

"'Away from the mountain we found in many communities some very distressing conditions. For example, in Cedartown, where we spent only as much time as was necessary to drive through at 25 miles per hour, a really outrageous situation exists. The town's fire engines (we personally observed two) are painted white. It was the first time in a long life that we ever saw a fire engine painted any color other than red. If a white fire engine is not illegal, it ought to be. At any rate, it's against public policy.'

"Isn't that terrible? Mr. Ochs doesn't like the color of our fire engines. Really outrageous, we'd say!

"We don't know whether that was the first trip Mr. Ochs had made, but for the record we would advise him that modern cities these days are rapidly changing to white engines. Fire department statistics will confirm that. But how would we expect such a hole in the road as Chattanooga to know anything about the modern trends?

"We cannot help but feel sorry for this disgruntled and confused columnist who has found our fire engines distressing.

"We hope by now that Mr. Ochs' rheumatism and stomach ulcers are better and if he ever has the opportunity to come back to 'the city of white fire engines,' we'll show him some more 'outrageous situations' in Georgia's foremost city.

"Or better still, it might be best that on Mr. Ochs' next trip to Florida he take Highway 41 and not be concerned with the color of our fire engines.

"We like 'em that way!"

JUNE NORWOOD, publisher of The Lowndes County News at Valdosta, has been seeing red, but not fire engines. His trouble is pecan tree pollen hay fever, an inflammation of the red network caused by the atom-sized fuzz off the nut trees. The afflicted editor vows it won't happen next year if he has to thumb his way out of the pecan belt.

My sympathy, Brother Norwood. With me it's the water oak. Spring fever is bad and so is hay fever, but spring hay fever is a worse combination than a centipede with corns.

I'm sure though that June has nothing which the Georgia Press' postconvention tour to New York won't cure.

It's something new all right. The "senior play in celluloid" can be filed in the memory chest along with the high school annual.

Raising Our Sights to Peace

WASHINGTON—In the confusion of international tensions and domestic controversy over foreign policy it is stimulating that the President of the United States should raise his sights and those of the rest of us to the prospects and rewards of peace. That President Truman did by holding the door wide open to negotiations for peace, by pledging our co-operation in disarmament, and by offering—if peace can be made sure—to contribute part of the resources we now apply to armaments "to a large-scale program of world-wide economic development." This bold encouragement was voiced in his message to Congress when he submitted the $8.5 billion foreign military-economic aid program which was notice again to Russia that, if she won't have peace, then we will be ready to resist.

But the olive branch shared attention with the shield of defense. And it is good again to have the positive emphasized—by the leader of the nation, the United States, that is in the best position among the free nations of the world to take the initiative.

It served to clear the air somewhat.

In our tradition the President becomes the voice of our people, and in the conclusion of his message to Congress Mr. Truman truly was that. He reflected the many voices raised silently and prayerfully for a peaceful adjustment of international frictions. He reflected, as well, the growing sentiment for making the United Nations really "a world community in which each nation, respecting world law, can play its distinctive and honorable role."

Likewise, he reflected some of the constructive and positive ideas circulating among our people which are designed to get at the roots of the world's maladjustments, notably, for example, that proposal advanced many months ago by Senator McMahon (Dem., Conn.). The senator proposed a 10-year, 50-billion-dollar world economic program to be financed from savings to be achieved by world disarmament.

Subsequently, President Truman offered our co-operation in a combined disarmament-economic recovery program in a speech to the United Nations. Only the other day a special UN committee recommended an annual 19-billion-dollar economic aid program for the world's undeveloped nations, to be financed by the "developed" nations over a period of years.

This idea of eliminating the causes of war by improving the living standards of people, through providing technical know-how for industrial development, promoting better agricultural methods, health, education, government administration and the like is gaining ground. It is again, as before, part of the economic aid program submitted to Congress to be carried out through ECA and the Point 4 program.

Now Mr. Truman is stressing it again. And his words should be accentuated, for they went to all parts of the world, even behind the Iron Curtain, where people are susceptible to them despite their domination by totalitarian dictatorships:

"We cannot win peace through appeasement. We cannot gain security in isolation. We will not surrender.

"Let it never be forgotten, however, that we are ready, as we always have been, to follow the road of peaceful settlement of disputes, of control and reduction of armaments, of co-operation in applying man's talents to the building of a just and prosperous world society.

"If the rulers of the Soviet Union did not drown their words of peace with the drums of war, if their professions of peaceful intent were matched with deeds, the century in which we live could become the brightest man has known upon this earth.

"For our part, if peace could be made sure, the American people would be glad to invest a part of the resources we must now allocate to defense to a large-scale program of world-wide economic development.

"The benefits of such a program would be immense; the cost a small part of what we must now pay to build our defenses at home and abroad. With such a program, we could, in co-operation with other peoples, inaugurate the most hopeful and fruitful period of peaceful development the world has ever seen."

This should be told over and over and over. It is much better than 62.25 billions in armaments, which is what we are to spend in the next year for ourselves and our Allies.

Grandpappy of the Ferris Wheel

Atlanta's first French citizen, Antonio Marquino, designed and constructed a 40-foot entertainment device known as "The Rotary Wheel." He operated it at Walton Springs in in Atlanta, about 1847. The Springs, located near the junction of Walton and Marietta Streets, was Atlanta's first amusement park and a favorite spot for picnics and political gatherings. Marquino's wheel was made of rough lumber and the passenger compartments were old packing boxes! Two Negroes supplied the necessary power to keep her rolling and, if you like to live dangerously, going over the top was quite a thrill. Some say the apparatus was the world's first wheel of the type to be known later as the Ferris wheel.

Marine Praises The Red Cross

NEW YORK—All of us in TV are in the habit of taking bows. F'instance, the fact that June marks our third continuous year in television is a matter of great pride, 156 consecutive shows over the co-axial cable.

But let's consider, then, the case of Edward G. Kean, the Howdy-Doody man.

This show, Howdy Doody, started Dec. 27, 1947, as a five-day-a-week programer. To date, they've racked up 812 consecutive shows, always ranked first in multiweekly shows, always been loaded with sponsors.

Bachelor Kean has been the only writer on the show and, in addition to scripting it, has found time to pen words and music to 75 songs, of which about 18 have won RCA Victor albums. On top of that, he writes the books built around the central TV character.

AT THE "PINTS OF BLOOD" ceremonies, a young TV actor registered and contributed his share. The nurse asked him, in return for his pint of blood, if he wished his ticket for the show that would salute the winners. "I won't be in town," said the donor.

TV donor was Ignatius (Iggie) Wolfington, who won a battlefield commission, while a platoon sergeant with the 102d Infantry Div., along with a Purple Heart, Oak Leaf Cluster and Bronze Star.

Wolfington can be applauded by Americans when he opens in the comedy lead in "Desert Song" at the Lambertville, N. J., Music Circus June 3.

DEAR ED: I'm a friend of Bob Hetherington and know that he would like any type entertainment for the UN personnel in Korea, especially those men now serving on the front lines. Through the Marine rotation some of us are on our way to the States now. This group arrived at an airport just outside Pusan and we were greeted by a mobile Red Cross unit which gave the men hot coffee and doughnuts. That one little gesture put the Red Cross in "solid" with everybody. The American Red Cross is doing a splendid job here in Pusan. They have a huge kitchen which furnishes coffee and doughnuts to various hospital units and yesterday alone they served over 53,000 doughnuts to the various UN forces here in the club. It's really something to see men from different parts of the world going into this Red Cross unit and each getting the same benefits.

In this unit they have available for use: Swimming pool, ping-pong, movies, and many other interesting pastimes. In the way of local UN talent there is one outstanding young lady who can really sing. Her name is Ann Gopbreed. At Grinnell College, Grinnell, Iowa, she majors in music.

Some of us are finally finding out that the Red Cross is worth every dollar we give it. CPL. HALLAND GIBSON JR.

May's Favorite Whipping Boy

May, it says somewhere, is the month for lovers and we're glad to hear it because it sure isn't the month for mothers. The merrie month of May, heigh-ho, reeks with honeysuckle and moonlight and other things conducive to romance but we'd like to warn any young folks who might be mooning around thinking of marriage that old May is a deceptive month. It will lull you into falling in love, it will disarm you completely and make you think the world is fair and life is very desirable. And before you get your wits about you, there you are all married and then practically before you know it you wake up one bright morn to discover that you're a mother—and as such, May's favorite whipping boy.

Everything happens to a mother in May and if the month wanes without throwing her completely it's because she's adept at juggling and/or tight-rope walking. She who conquereth May conquereth all and no fooling.

The phone never rings in May that it doesn't bring new duties, new responsibilities, new crises to her who is the mother of children.

"This is Mrs. Blank," says your earliest morning caller a little defensively. (SHE doesn't like this May business any more than you do.) "I'm the grade mother of Miss Whoosis' room and I want to discuss the matter of a present with you."

"Yes?" you say timorously. You love Miss Whoosis. Your children love Miss Whoosis. You would give her the moon if you could reach it and she wanted it. But as a matter of cold fact, you're stone broke. You could reach the moon almost as easily as you can reach a buck.

The sweet voice, still a little defensive, goes on: ". . . and so Our Committee thought it would be nice if all the children brought 50 cents apiece. There's nothing compulsory about it, you understand. Just let your child bring the 50 cents tomorrow if you want to."

What does she mean "compulsory," you wonder, bristling a bit. What does she mean "IF you want to?" Of course, you want to. Your child loves Miss Whoosis. Miss Whoosis is a perfectly wonderful teacher.

"Certainly my child will bring the 50 cents!" you say snappishly. "It's little enough to do. I don't see why the committee didn't make it a dollar apiece and get something really nice!"

Of course, you're showing off and the grade mother knows it. She tells you that Our Committee is trying to put teacher presents on a sensible plane this year and harks back to the year when some teachers collected corsages made of dollar bills. Fifty cents, Our Committee has agreed, is sensible and multiplying it by the number of children you have, you know that sensible or not, it's all the traffic will bear at your house.

Then there are recitals and festivals and class trips. Junior has to have sandwiches for the picnic and money to see the Cyclorama, or buy the train ticket or take advantage of whatever cultural and educational advantages are available on the junket his class has projected. Mothers meet to discuss May festival costumes.

Sister is going to be a flower or a bird or a fairy and, by gosh, she's going to look like one whether you have a talent for sewing in zippers or not.

May queens are being crowned all over the place. Maypoles danced around. Fiddles are squeaking, tap dance shoes clacking and mothers and fathers are jammed into hot school auditoriums waiting in quiet desperation for 43 other tortured young performers to get through their act before The One Child they came to see appears.

Scouts have final meetings and parties for leaders. There are cook-outs and fly-ups and church and Sunday School parties.

Oh, May is a beautiful month, May is a fine month. But May is not for mothers, heigh-ho.

It Has Outlived Any Usefulness

Our weekly newspaper brother, Ed Methvin, of Eastman, has "thrown the fat in the fire" by attacking the county unit system from a two-unit county, like Hancock, instead of from a "big city" county.

We hope he wins. The unit system has worn out its usefulness, if ever needed.

CHANNING COPE

Good Work at Watkinsville

WATKINSVILLE, Ga.—Some of the best oats I have observed anywhere is the Arlington variety now making seed at the Watkinsville station. They are tall, very vigorous, and have the look of a crop that will make lots of grazing. The Arlington is best fitted for grazing, I understand. In the next field to this Arlington oat is a fine field of Victorgrain, grown for the seed. Farmers should inspect both of these fields. They are outstanding. And so is the Chancellor variety of wheat growing at Watkinsville. The station has about 35 acres of this variety. Prior to the dry period it looked as if it would make 40 bushels of wheat per acre. Each dry day cuts the yield down pretty definitely. Probably at the rate of about five bushels per acre per week if the drouth occurs at the ripening period.

The fescue-kudzu rotation is proving of interest here, also. Fescue seems to like the shade of kudzu and grows better during summer in the kudzu fields than where grown alone. It needs some light which may be provided through the mowing or grazing of the kudzu in midsummer. This mowing should not interfere too much with the rotation. Light grazing or a light mowing will do the trick.

Cotton may be followed with a combination of oats, fescue, and ladino clover, particularly if the cotton rows are well separated.

This station now plants cotton in 6-foot rows, which makes drilling-in-the-middles more effective and does not disturb the cotton growing during the fall when the drilling is done. Oats, fescue and ladino planted in the middles provides grazing from the oats the first winter and from fescue and ladino later on.

The Arizona cypress is doing well at this station. It is a small Christmas tree and is ready for sale after about seven years. I saw some of these on land too poor to grow much of anything else and they were doing well.

One other unusual demonstration in land cover and feed taken from the cover is the kudzu experiment where kudzu is mowed for hay and the field is planted to corn. Oats are planted in the corn middles in the fall and then the kudzu comes back the following spring. Never a lost moment!

And finally, the Kobe lespedeza rotation with cotton makes 200 pounds more seed cotton per acre where the lespedeza is allowed to make seed than where it is mowed for hay.

And thanks to Project Supervisor Hendrickson and his associates, Carreker, Adams, and Barnett, for their patience and competence.

WESTBROOK PEGLER

'Old Home Week for Thugs'

TUCSON, Ariz—Ralph Howard Alsup, the president of the Central Labor Council of the American Federation of Labor for Clark County, which includes Las Vegas, and vice-president of the Nevada State Federation of Labor, is a criminal unioneer of the most dangerous type. He is now on $10,000 bail during his appeal from a jury verdict which held him guilty of shooting Ray Folsom, a terrorized rank-and-file painter, because Folsom went to a union hall above a gambling house to intercede peacefully in favor of a friend who had been brought up on charges within the union. This crime was committed on Dec. 3, 1949. Folsom was explaining the situation to three officials of the painters' union when Alsup, whose home union is not the painters' but the plumbers' union, butted in, slugged him with a gun-butt and then shot him in the side of his body. In the trial last March, Folsom testified that James King, the business agent of the painters' union, shouted to Alsup to get out, and pointed the way for him to escape.

Alsup has a long criminal record. He rules the unfortunate subjects of his domain by physical terror and by persecution within the corrupt circle of the unions, which he controls with the active connivance of powerful Nevada politicians. Roger Foley, the district attorney of Clark County, who conducted the prosecution, obtained a report from the record clerk of the Texas prison system at Huntsville, Texas, stating that Alsup served two years there for helping a prisoner to escape from a state reformatory, and later served three more prison terms concurrently for robbery with firearms, burglary and grand larceny. The interval between his release after serving his two-year term and his return to Huntsville was only 13 months.

The second time he went to Huntsville he was under a sentence of 25 years for the armed robbery but was let go in August, 1940, after serving eight years and two months. The term used by J. C. Roberts, the record clerk, to define the condition of Alsup's release was "reprieve of sentence." Three years later, in August, 1943, Alsup got a "conditional pardon."

In Las Vegas he has a reputation as a thug. While awaiting trial for shooting Folsum he was charged with assaulting a business man with his fists while "exhibiting" a pistol, and with carrying a concealed weapon.

The jury found him not guilty of assault, although it was obvious from the facts that he called on the man looking for trouble. The juries disagreed in the trials of the other two charges, brandishing the gun and carrying a concealed weapon, and they were dropped. Alsup had gone to a refrigerating plant to set up a picket line because he said the business man had not paid overtime to an employe who had worked on a Saturday. The victim of the incident explained that the employe had asked for a day off during the working week and had agreed to make it up on Saturday at straight time.

Under Nevada law an ex-convict who carries a gun is guilty of a felony, but Robert A. Jones, the district attorney at the time, held that Alsup had received a full pardon and restitution of all the rights of citizenship. Therefore, even if he were guilty of carrying a concealed weapon without a permit, his offense would be only a misdemeanor. This gun case occurred on Aug. 21, 1950, while Alsup was awaiting trial for the Folsom shooting.

In September, 1950, while he was awaiting trial for shooting Folsom, Alsup was appointed a delegate to the national convention of the American Federation of Labor. This event is gangsters' Old Home Week, for there is no social or official aversion to criminals in the higher, or lower, circles of the AFL. At one such convention in New Orleans David Dubinsky was badly beaten by Joe Fay, an international vice-president of the operating engineers' union, dominated by a gang of criminal conspirators, because Dubinsky had announced that he was going to offer a resolution which would exclude crooks like Fay from the higher councils. Fay, a henchman of Frank Hague, the boss of the corrupt New Jersey Democratic machine, later was convicted in the city of New York by Vincent O'Connor, a brilliant young assistant to Frank Hogan, the district attorney, and sent to prison for 10 years.

When Fay went to trial on charges of income tax fraud, the case was assigned to Thoma Francis Meaney and the prosecution was handled in such a flagrant manner that Tom Clark, the Attorney General of the United States at that time, condemned the prosecution as a ". . . damned outrage." But Clark never punished anyone for the outrage. He is now a Justice of the Supreme Court.

These facts are reviewed to emphasize the fact that the American Federation of Labor is hospitable to criminals of the worst type as union executives and that the Roosevelt and Truman administrations have maintained a notorious alliance with the criminal institution of unionism.

World's First Jet Ace Flies Back to U. S.

TOKYO, May 27—(AP)—Capt. James Jabara, the world's first jet ace, headed toward the United States and the arms of his wife Sunday night.

Wearing a borrowed uniform that "doesn't fit very well," he left Haneda Air Base at 11:30 p. m., (8:30 a. m. Sunday, EST).

He borrowed the uniform, a summer one, after misplacing his own.

"I may look tacky but I feel great," he said in a telephone conversation just before departure. "My wife will be at Travis Air Force Base at Fairfield-Suisun, California, waiting for me.

"If the winds are okay we'll get in at 9 p. m., May 28, San Francisco time."

Jabara scored a double-kill on Sunday, May 20, in North Korea when he downed two enemy MIGs. That ran his total to six kills—one past the ace-making minimum. He had earned ace-rating in World War II with nine German planes destroyed. He also shared credit with another flier for a 10th German plane.

He was decorated with a Distinguished Service Cross and turned into an instructor.

Washington ordered him back to the States for still undisclosed duty.

The pools are opening

When this Saturday finally comes the schoolroom will be just a dim memory to every Atlanta school child. Even now his feet can hardly bear the burden of shoe leather, and some part of his middle region, just a little above the waist, keeps popping up and down every time he thinks about Atlanta's pools opening Saturday. Western Style Picnic Fun for Whole Family

By AGNES REASOR OLMSTEAD

Anyone who has ever thrilled to a horse opera will love a Western style picnic. The chuckwagon is the trunk of your car; the open trail is the nearest highway leading to a picnic spot, and the time is this coming Wednesday, if Memorial Day means a holiday to you.

Food and preparations should be a family matter to relieve mother and to make more fun for everyone.

Scrub out the thermos jugs and fill them with iced tea. Better take two, one to drink en route or when you are preparing the meal, the other to drink with the picnic.

Here's the menu and suggestions on how everyone can help get it ready then cook for himself. Don't skimp . . . remember picnic appetites are big ones with people consuming twice as much as they ordinarily do.

CHECK WAGON MENU
Cowboy hot barbecue sandwiches
Western egg salad sandwiches
Relishes — including tomatoes, carrot sticks, lettuce, chili sauce, pickles, potato chips, olives, celery.
Cole Slaw Ranchero
Oatmeal Cookies
Toasted Marshmallows
Bananas and Apples
Iced Tea Texas Style

While Dad builds a fire from kindling and charcoal, some other young husky should be gathering long, slender sticks cut fresh from trees and sharpen the ends.

Iced Tea Texas Style: To make two large thermos jugs of this wonderful tea, just pour 6 pints of fast boiling water over 24 teaspoons of tea or 24 tea bags. Steep no less than three minutes. Stir, remove tea and pour into thermos jugs with plenty of ice. Add one cup of pineapple juice and ¼ cup of angostura bitters to each thermos jug of tea. Sweeten to taste. Be sure to take plenty of lemon wedges along, too.

Cowboy Hot Barbecue Sandwiches: When the barbecue sticks are ready, whoever is the "boss man" of the outfit should skewer chunks of steak already cut to 1½-inch thickness on the sticks alternately with mushroom caps and onion slices, brush them with melted butter and set aside for grilling over the open fire when ready. Take these delicious cowboy barbecues straight from the fire and into frankfurter rolls. Everyone, of course, cooks his own.

Western Egg Salad Sandwiches: Be sure your chuckwagon includes several long loaves of French bread, partially sliced through to 1½-inch thickness. Spread the slices with hard-boiled eggs chopped fine and mixed with chopped onion, green pepper, pimiento pepper and mayonnaise to moisten. Top with a slice of ripe red tomato, lettuce, add a well-buttered lid and you've got a cowboy-sized sandwich for a he-man appetite.

Cole Slaw Ranchero: To be taken to the picnic already prepared. Make coleslaw by regular method, but add lots and lots of paprika until the slaw turns almost red. Salt and pepper well and add an extra dash of vinegar for a real Southwestern tartness.

Coleslaw, fruit, cookies, potato chips, and relishes should be placed on a nearby table where everyone can fill up his plate, draw up to the fire, cook, and eat.

As your campfire dies down, you'll want to complete your Western Picnic by singing cowboy songs.

O'Keefe Annual Banquet Features Club Activity Train

By PAT LIVINGSTON

Station Master Franklin Prosser's call for "All Aboard" put 37 clubs on O'Keefe's Activity Train Thursday night.

Cardboard club cars featuring every activity from athletics to student council; from dance sponsors to cafeteria servers were coupled together behind a moon-faced engine pulling the train.

Feature stunt of the evening at the school's twenty-eighth annual activity banquet, the "Activity Special" rolled along under boy and girl power, a bright-painted "walking signboard."

Lorene McAdams played the undecided student who didn't know what club she wanted to join. After Frank's sales talk, she said she wanted them all.

Napkins and tablecloths in the Dixie Ballroom of the Henry Grady were green, school color of the Fighting Irish. So were most of the cars in the train.

The Girls' Ensemble, in filmy lavender dresses, sang for dinner music and accompanied the "Choo-choo." Toastmaster Hal Fowler introduced the guests with dimpled Catherine Ochsenfeld welcoming Speaker J. R. Brokhoff, pastor of the Lutheran Church of the Redeemer.

In telling the students "how to be truly great," Brokhoff gave them three requisites—have a great cause; possess a true humility of character and have a love of others expressed in service to mankind.

Principal Stanley M. Hastings, glorying in a yearly custom of leading community singing, finished the program with "Cheer, Cheer, for dear old O'Keefe," Alma Mater and the school's Irish songs.

Make-Up Light This Summer

By SCARLETT BLANTON

According to cosmetologists, women will keep cooler heads this Summer. Make-up is lighter, cooler, and prettier, we're told—less emphasis on dark-mahogany suntans, more on the golden-girl look.

The experts say that many women will abandon their colorless complexion foundation (which is then covered with powder) for the cooler colored base which needs no added powder.

Summer powder shades lean to rosy and tan rather than clearer Winter colors. As a rule, powder shades for Summer are three or four shades darker.

Lipsticks are also undergoing a revolutionary change. They are truer reds and pinks this year, veering from the bluer shades once so popular. But the news in lipsticks is that practically every manufacturer is now making a permanent, longer lasting product, swim and kiss-proof.

As for eye makeup, it is still highly recommended, but over-exaggeration is out. Eye-shadow, used discriminately in the daytime, is advised. The new iridescent shadow (inspired, perhaps, by the new Broadway musical, "The King and I,") is the look for after-dark.

"Sun-tanning to an extreme degree, only dries out the skin pigment. Excessive skin-drying makes lines twice as noticeable," they conclude, so take your tanning easy, girls, your skin will thank you!

Questions and Answers

ACNE CLEARED UP

Sent for your Acne pamphlet for my daughter, and it was wonderful the way the recipe cleared up her greasy skin, blackheads and pimples. Her very personality has improved greatly since her complexion became normal. She thinks you are okay. . . . (Mrs. M. R.)

Ans.—Aw, I bet she says that about all the doctors. On written request (no clipping, please,) any reader who provides a stamped, self-addressed encelope may have the pamphlet ACNE—BLACKHEADS and PIMPLES.

WHITE OF EGG

Is there any nourishment in the white of an egg? I dislike it and would like to take only the yolk. (H. F. M.)

Ans.—Yes, about one-fifth as much as in the yolk.

NOT SO FAST

Is there danger of fat or cholesterol deposits in the arteries from eating eggs, milk and other foods containing cholesterol? If inosotol breaks down this fatty deposit, please state which foods contain inosotol — and don't holler "B-Complex" and leave the question to speculation. (M. W.)

Ans.—Stick around — maybe we'll know something about it terol and inosotol are milk, egg yolk, etc.—but don't you cry, in the sweet by-and-by. At present it is all speculation. Richest sources of both choles-Ma'am, for the science of nutrition is making great strides and eventually we'll catch up with the bright young people who write the articles for the magazines.

Manners a la Mode

By YOLANDE GWIN

Dear Miss Gwin:
What is the correct timing for members of the wedding party to arrive at the church?
BRIDE-TO-BE'S MOTHER.

Answer — The bride-elect and her father ride to the church together in a car driven either by a friend or a chauffeur, arriving about 15 minutes before the ceremony. If the bride-elect is to dress at the church, however, it would be wise for her arrival to be at least a half-hour before the actual time of the ceremony. The same timing applies to the bridesmaids. The bridegroom and best man arrive about half an hour before the ceremony. Ushers report an hour in advance. The time of the arrival of the mothers of the couple as well as the father of the groom should be about 10 minutes prior to the beginning of the wedding march. The bride - elect's mother is the last to enter the church before the bridal party enters. The groom-elect's parents precede her.

Dear Miss Gwin:
When traveling by motor is it permissible for a wife to register for her husband if he is busy putting the car away?
MRS. J. C. B.

Answer—At the best hotels an employee will take charge of the car at the door and park it for the guest. Some men do not care to permit this, and if the wife so desires there is no objection to her registering, but she can just as well wait in a parlor until her husband arrives and arranges about the rooms.

Dear Miss Gwin:
Does a minister charge a fee for christening babies? If there is no exact charge, should we give him something anyway? If so, how much is generally expected?
MOTHER.

Answer—There is no charge made for christening babies. Parents having this ceremony performed usually give something for the minister to use for church maintenance or the like. Any amount may be given.

Dear Miss Gwin:
I have been going with a Tech man and he has asked me to visit him at his home in Florida after school closes. Would it be proper and should I go on his invitation?
MABLE S.

Answer—It would be perfectly proper to visit him, but the invitation should come from his mother or his sister.

Dear Miss Gwin:
We are newly married and have just moved into our apartment. We must have our name on the door as well as the letter box. Must I use my card or my husband's?

Answer—It is the usual form to use the husband's card. If he has none, then use yours with the "Mr." added. Such as Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Smith.

TEST DETERMINES READING SKILL

Ray McCreary Reads

Aptitude Tests Helping 'Teens Map Career Courses

By MARTHA SMITH

It's a wise child who knows his own ambition.

But wise or otherwise, few people at high school age really know what career they want to follow, much less what field is likely to provide happiness and success for the individual.

In Atlanta there are people who'll help any young person determine where his aptitudes lie, and whether they fit in with his desires. For about $35 these experts will administer and interpret about eight to 12 hours of tests which indicate certain aptitudes and skills.

Miss Christine Wyatt, who holds a master of arts degree in psychology and is a leader in this kind of testing, says:

"In investigations of this type we cross-test and recheck in many ways. After it's all finished we can help anyone . . . child or adult . . . find where his talents lie and for what type of career he is best suited. We are not fortune tellers; we can't predict the future, but we can help a young person determine which field of work likely holds the most happiness for him."

First for the help-hungry high schooler comes interviews on personal history. The examiner finds out what the adolescent likes to do, what he has already done; what he hopes to do in the way of personal achievement as well as his adjustment with other people.

In the test determining reading skill, as one reads the testing device moves down the page. The test indicates how much he understands of what he has read and at what speed he reads best.

Jigsaw pieces put together form an automobile. The speed with which he sees the picture and how fast they are put together indicate powers of perception.

Fitting colored marbles to matching colored holes shows the measure of co-ordination between the hand, eye and mind as well as indicating color perception.

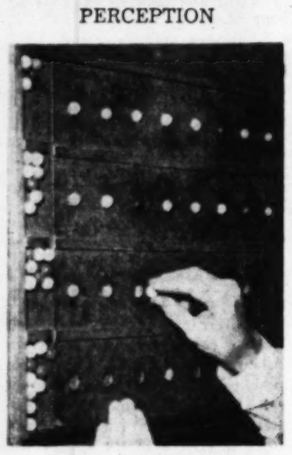

Different colored blocks arranged to match a pictured figure are timed to test a form of mental perception and reasoning that ties in with general learning ability.

Some of these tests use pencil and paper, some a punchboard and others involve the co-ordination of mind and hands. Results of all of these tests then come together to indicate the general aptitude of the individual.

Sometimes the people who give these tests are called "psychometricians." For the interpretation of tests, however, a trained psychologist is needed.

MARY HAWORTH

Rejected Spinster Seeks Cure

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: What is the best cure for depression? The man I want, and have wanted for three years, does not want me. I have tried every way I know to win him. The realization of my failure, and the prospect of a future without him, are making me so blue that I snap at my family, grumble at my boss and feel like weeping when I am alone.

Bart is 42 and I am 37. Neither of us has been married, each has been engaged. Except for religion, our backgrounds are similar. He is a doctor, my two brothers are doctors; I work for a doctor. We have "early American" ancestry; we like the same people, enjoy the same sports, have the same political views and laugh at the same jokes.

Finally, I've been running after him a bit. Then I stopped, to see if he would come to me. He has not. Therefore I concluded that I should drop the matter. Bart has admitted that he loved me; but after these admissions I wouldn't see him for months.

I have been going out with other people, eligible old friends but I feel beaten, and as if my gloom and irritability were contagious. I would greatly appreciate your advice, either on "how to get your man," or "how to beat the blues."

C. E.

DEAR C. E.: A state of depressions refers to an emotional complex in which frustration, anxiety and seething anger are habitually at work, unconsciously; and which suddenly has been activated from a chronic to an acute sense of suffering. When a harried neurotic feels tried beyond his endurance, yet sees no respite from his problems, and is inhibited by polite considerations from acting savagely, in seeking satisfactions or expressing hostility, we get the letdown reaction known as "depression."

It occurs to me that you already had a problem of anxiety about the prospect of a perennially frustrated love life, due to continuing spinsterhood, when you fixed your heart on Bart three years ago. You were courting him in mariage, as the solution of your problem of enfrenched anxiety. His obstinate evasion of your purpose progressively increased your burden of discouragement and sense of failure in respect to men.

For advice, I think you should avail yourself of psychological help in exploring your latent emotional attitudes towards your brothers, which may be a blend of subservience and hostility. You'll probably find that your lifelong difficulties with men were forged in this arena of childhood experience.

In my opinion, the problem of "how to get your man" will be answered by the same wisdom which enables you to "beat the blues." And this wisdom can only be gained by the inward process of knowing thyself, and arriving at a new alignment of feelings in dealing with folks.

M. H.

Mary Haworth counsels through her column, not by mail or personal interview. Write her in care of The Constitution.

Using Bottled Bleach

Bottled bleach is more effective when added to the washing water, rather than the rinsing water, when washing white clothes. It also insures removal of all traces of the bleach during the rinsing.

BLOSS AND HOME MADE JIG SAW

"Puzzles" Turn into Pictures

Wood Carving Hobby Keeps Man Busy Making Family Gifts

The jig-saw puzzles A. G. Bloss matches up turn out to be handsome paintings or permanent designs on table tops or fancy decorations on wooden salad bowls.

Mr. Bloss inlays tiny slivers of wood, the thickness of a post card, into all kinds of beautiful things in his garage work shop at 733 Greenwood Ave., N. E.

A bright-eyed gentleman of 75 years, Mr. Bloss was looking for something to "turn his mind to" two years ago when he gave up working as a cable splicer.

This is one of a series of interviews with Atlanta men who have unusual pastimes, presented to help Home and Family readers develop new hobby ideas.

He found a wood-working ad in a hobby magazine and sent off for a kit.

"It had everything in it, all the pieces of wood and a pattern to make into a picture of a Yankee clipper," he remembers. "All I had to do was put it together."

Now Mr. Bloss gets his "inspiration" from illustrations in magazines. He traces them on paper and carves out the pieces from sheets of wood.

"It takes time to put them together, but time's what I've got the most of," Mr. Bloss explains. Besides, his wife Mattie, and son and daughter, Robert and Virginia Bloss, seem "right glad" to have his handiwork.

"I use maybe 15 different kinds of wood in one of my pictures," he estimates. "It comes from all over the world." Some of it he orders from a wood-working shop in New York City at 8 to 50 cents a square foot. Sometimes he finds just what he needs on a tree in his back yard, on a packing case or a 2x4 plank.

"All the tools you need is a jig saw, a hand saw, a good pocket knife and a square," Mr. Bloss says.

But he's made a few machines just because he likes to tinker with things. Out of pipes, files and bolts, a stove and a door knob or two, Mr. Bloss has made up a drill press, a belt sander, a grinding tool and a turning lathe.

A 25-cent wood-working manual started Mr. Bloss on his wood-working spree. He recommends it as an inexpensive, "fine" hobby.

FESTIVAL QUEEN TELLS HOW SHE WAS CHOSEN!

This sparkling young beauty attributes her spectacular win to good grooming habits. "A girl can't be too careful about the little things," she says. "Cleanliness first, of course . . . I shower or tub at least once a day and then use my favorite deodorant, Etiquet, right after. Etiquet really stops odor and checks perspiration so I know that I'm dainty all day long."

Patented formula

There's no other deodorant like Etiquet—the formula is exclusive and can't be copied. A special ingredient in it curbs the bacteria that cause perspiration odor. It's antiseptic and does not irritate normal skin. Independent laboratory tests prove Etiquet does not weaken fabrics or damage clothing.

Within reach of all

The low price of Etiquet is only half of its economy story. It won't dry out in the jar . . . you can use every bit you've paid for and the last dab is as creamy-smooth as the first, whether you buy it in the jar or tube. Variety of sizes, only 10¢ to 59¢ plus tax.

If you prefer a liquid, try Etiquet Spray-On in the unbreakable blue plastic bottle. Just one spray keeps you dainty all day. Many months' supply costs only 59¢ plus tax.

Simmons Co. Takes Over Sheffield Plating Firm

Simmons Increases Efficiency With Enlarged Facilities

News of special interest to the housewife is the announcement that all activities of the Sheffield Plating Company have been absorbed by the Simmons Plating Works, 219 South Pryor St.

This combine now makes the Simmons Plating Works one of the largest plants in the nation for speedily and efficiently turning out silverware. They have the most modern and up-to-date facilities for handling this type of work and are specializing in repairing and replating silverware.

Simmons maintains a large casting department where they make missing parts for silverware, such as lids, spouts, handles, etc. They handle both sterling and plated articles. New ivory or ebony insulators are installed where needed, leaks mended, dents removed and hollow-ware is again "made new."

After being repaired, the items are given a coating of sterling silver plate. They also install new stainless blades in table knives. They remove the old blade.

The Sheffield firm formerly was located on Ponce de Leon Ave. All equipment has been moved and added to the Simmons Plating Works facilities.

The Simmons Plating Works fills not only plating needs of thousands of households, jewelers and the like, but it has established an additional plant where it is rendering many services of a similar kind. Its gold and silver replating is done mainly at its South Pryor Street plant, but in its auxiliary plants it renders a fine service for retinning milk cans and dairy equipment, pasteurizers, etc. Dairies especially find this a most economical convenience, as through the complete pickup and truck delivery system maintained by the Simmons concern, milk cans and other equipment which may need retinning are picked up by the trucks and returned on the next regular stop.

The Simmons work is national in scope. Examples of repairs and replating and retinning are found in practically every State in the Union. The firm has also filled orders from Mexico and Cuba.

Among many services rendered is one that funeral directors take advantage of. It repairs and replates lowering devices. Trained mechanics do this work and supply any missing or broken parts.

A highly appreciated service is given to musicians and players of band wind instruments — trombones, trumpets, Sousaphones, etc. They repair and replate such instruments until they look and play like new. It gives special attention to dealers in musical instruments and repairs any instrument that may be damaged or dented or needs replating. No musical instruments of any kind are sold by the Simmons plant, but the dealer is protected in their refusal to make sales.

A call, CY. 8646, will bring a representative to your home to discuss any repairing or replating needs, or any other type of work this concern does. Without any obligation on your part, he will give you complete estimates of what the cost will be to do the job you would like to have done.

NEW HOME FOR P. D. G.—The P. D. G. Exterminating Company, Inc., has now settled into new and larger quarters at 3020 Buford Highway, N. E. They specialize in termite eradication, as well as home modernization and improvement.

P.D.G. Exterminating Co., Inc., Expands Quarters, Services

The P. D. G. Exterminating Co., Inc., for more than 22 years one of Atlanta's leading termite control companies, announces expansion of quarters and services at their new location, 3020 Buford Highway, N. E.

The firm specializes in termite eradication and repairs as well as the extermination and control of insect and rodent infestation in homes, hotels, hospitals and institutions. All jobs are performed by experienced personnel.

Known by many home and property owners since 1928 as conducting business from their old location at 452-4-6 North Ave., N. E., the P. D. G. Company found it necessary to enlarge their quarters in order to better serve their increasing list of clients. The new tion to dealers in musical instruments and repairs any instrument that may be damaged or dented or needs replating. No musical instruments of any kind are sold by the Simmons plant, but the dealer is protected in their refusal to make sales.

quarters at 3020 Buford Highway, N. E., embrace an area of approximately 3,000 square feet and include a modern warehouse and offices. Paul DeGouras, widely known in the home maintenance and improvment field in this section is president of the firm. Miss Fleeta J. Graham is secretary and treasurer.

Several years ago the firm added to its services the laying, sanding and finishing of wood floors. They also handle linoleum, rubber, cork and asphalt tile, as well as parquet flooring.

As the result of increased demand for various types of home services, the P. D. G. concern recently added several new departments to execute complete home maintenance, such as decorating, laying concrete drives and walkways, as well as the installation of outdoor fireplaces and barbecut pits.

Officials of the P. D. G. firm call attention to the fact that the approach of warmer weather is also the danger signal to watch out for termites. Statistics show that termite damage runs into millions of dollars annually. Only prompt, effective control measures can prevent termite destruction to building foundations and walls.

Telephone CHerokee 7865 for free inspection and estimate without obligation. A five-year guarantee is featured by the P. D. G. concern on termite control jobs, with 24 or 30 months to pay. Night and Sundays, call CHerokee 1856.

GEORGE KINT
Announces New Aid

HAROLD K. GREEN
Offers Consultation

Telex, makers of the world's first wearable vacuum tube hearing aid, has announced the development of the world's first successful cordless electronc aid to hearing, according to an announcement today by George Kint, owner of the Kint Hearing Aid Service, 324 Mortgage Guarantee Building.

This new aid opens up whole new vistas of hope to the deafened—especially those who want the closest approach to good hearing with nothing to show and almost nothing to wear, according to the announcement. There is no electrical cord to hang down and no button to wear in the ear.

"I can hardly believe it myself," stated Mr. Kint, local distributor who has been fitting conventional hearing aids for many years. "There is just not any cord or receiver button at all."

Also announced was the opening of a special hearing clinic Monday and Tuesday in the Kint Hearing Aid offices, for free examination and consultation. Presiding will be Harold K. Green, public relations director of the southeast states for Telex.

With a wide circle of acquaintances in the Atlanta area, Mr. Green is now in his 17th year in hearing aid work, starting as a distributor in Charlestown, S. C. He is considered one of the best-known authorities in the nation on the subject of hearing correction. Hard of hearing himself, Mr. Green has a complete understanding from personal experience of the many problems which are found by the hard of hearing. You are cordially invited to discuss your hearing problems with him.

Mr. Kint also stated that he is now prepared to give prompt and efficient service on practically all makes of hearing aids. If you have a hearing aid that is not serviced in the Atlanta area, bring it in. "If it cannot be repaired at once, we will be glad to lend you and aid to use while yours is being repaired," said Mr. Kint. "In this way you will have uninterrupted service."

It was also pointed out that if you are having difficulty with your hearing, Telex has, in addition to the new cordless hearing aid, many other models designed for a particular hearing loss. They offer you not only an incomparable line of hearing aids, but also expert understanding and guidance to "keep you hearing the rest of your life."

A unique feature about Kint Hearing Air Service is the fact that batteries in stock are refrigerated. They have a large commercial refrigerator in their offices for this purpose. This method of stocking batteries is in accordance with the suggestion from battery manufacturers that dealers refrigerate hearing aid batteries to help assure maximum battery life.

The Kint Hearing Aid Service invites you to visit their offices at 324 Mortgage Guarantee Building. Telephone MA. 8154 for appointment.

Ga. Tent & Awning Co. Features 'Zephyr' All-Season Awnings

Custom Made For Buildings, Stores, Homes

Your home will be more beautiful—and 12 degrees cooler (proved by scientific ventilation tests)—with Zephyr all-season ventilated wood awnings, now being custom manufactured and distributed in this area by the Georgia Tent & Awning Company, recognized as one of the South's leading awning concerns.

In introducing these new Zephyr awnings to the public, officials of the firm announced today that the awnings can be tailored to fit all types of doors and windows—or as exterior store front marquees, or as interior canopies. Additional machinery has been installed in Georgia Tent & Awning Company's modern plant at 228 Margaret St., S. E., and officials said that delivery on Zephyr awnings can be made immediately. During the past month, personnel have received special training in the Zephyr processes and techniques.

Study the photograph at right. "Until you have had the experience," says Clifford Wright, of the Georgia Tent & Awning Company, "you will never know what a difference Zephyr permanent, scientifically ventilated, all-season awnings can make. Zephyr awnings admit light; they 'breathe,' and they shelter."

Note in the picture how Zephyr awnings artistically adorns and distinguishes the building. Zephyr awnings put the "finishing touch" on the appearance of your home or place of business. Their neat lines, and the dash of either pastel or bright color, makes the home or store a "showplace."

Remember, too, that Zephyr's smart appearance is permanent. There is no taking down and putting up each Spring and Fall. There are no moving parts to get out of order. They are unaffected by any kind of weather, any season.

Mr. Wright further points out that Zephyr awnings assure you the effective result of the genuine "thermo-syphon" principle of scientific ventilation. "Don't be confused by imitations of similar appearance," he stated. "Zephyr awnings are fully covered by patent and are available only through licensed manufacturers. Be sure that you get only genuine Zephyr awnings."

Color harmony is a particular feature of Zephyr awnings. They blend well with homes of wood, brick and stone. You can have all the awnings around your home painted in identical colors. Or you can vary the colors, but keep a basic harmony. Stripes or solids . . . matching or contrasting colors. Which do you prefer?

Zephyrs, made of the finest California Redwood and red cedar, woods, are ideal for store fronts, too. Take any plain business building, large or small, with "naked" plate glass and brick walls. Zephyr awnings will transform it into an attractive, inviting modern building; vastly cooler in summer, cozily sheltered in winter.

Zephyr awnings are especially timely now. During hot summer days the Zephyr awning will cool your home as much as 12 degrees, as previousyy stated. Their patented ventilating feature sets up a forced draft circulation that "pulls out" the hot, still air normally trapped along room ceilings. Light and air are softly filtered through the awning . . . heat and glare are reflected.

The Georgia Tent & Awning Company invites you to call today for a free estimate, and suggestions for styling Zephyr awnings for your home or place of business. Call CY. 7551, write or visit the firm at 228 Margaret St., S. E. There is absolutely no obligation on your part.

MAKES HOME SMART AND LIVABLE—Zephyr ventilated awnings are scientifically designed to match or enhance the architecture of any home. Note how the pretty home above is especially benefited by this "beauty treatment."

H. Mendel and Co. Features Father's Day Town Topic Line

Retailers in Southeast Hail Fine Selection

The nationally advertised Town Topic line of shirts and sport shirts, well-known to American men since 1877, is being strongly promoted by H. Mendel and Company, 185 Pryor St., S. W., in connection with Father's Day, June 17.

The selections of men's shirts and sport shirts being offered by H. Mendel and Company for this important selling event are considered to be the most noteworthy in fashion and unusual in value that have been seen by Southeastern retailers in many years.

Among the shirts being offered by H. Mendel and Company are solid-color broadcloths in short and long sleeves. The colors themselves are rich, dusty tones. Combed short-sleeve, open-weave sport shirts are presented in a wide range of colors. Seersuckers, so popular in the South, are being featured in novelty prints.

H. Mendel and Company also has an unusual group of Town Topic broadcloth prints, short and long-sleeve woven rayon plaids, short and long sleeve nylon acetate sport shirts in beautiful light shades, and a sparkling range of colors in gabardines. The Town Topic dress shirts being featured by H. Mendel and Company start at $2.95 retail, and include both whites and fancies in numerous collar styles.

Comfortable "shorties" are the feature of the Town Topic pajama line, particularly at this time of year. These are styled with knee-length trousers and elbow-length sleeves, and come in many stripes, and solid colors.

H. Mendel and Company is in a position to supply retailers with exclusive Town Topic promotion material, which is backed up by a sustained national advertising campaign in the Saturday Evening Post. Promotion material for Southeastern retailers includes full-color streamers, exciting, colorful display cards, mats for local newspaper ads, radio scripts and reprints of the national Town Topic ads.

A half-page in the Saturday Evening Post on June 9 will feature a number of the above items being sold by H. Mendel and Company.

In addition to the famous Town Topic line, H. Mendel and Company has many other popular Father's Day merchandise that will be of profitable interest to merchants throughout the Southeast. Such nationally known names as Hanes, Otis and MacDee underwear and sportswear; Texdale swim trunks; Bear Brand and Otis sox; Boston belts, suspenders and garters; Esquire ties; men's handkerchiefs, slacks and many other timely gift items to increase the retailer's Father's Day sales.

Orders and inquiries will receive immediate attention.

Urania's LP Enhances Strauss' Der Rosenkavalier

By HOWELL JONES

Richard Strauss' Der Rosenkavalier is generally regarded as the finest opera written in the last 40 years. For any dissenters, it is recommended that they listen to Urania's reproduction of this masterpiece on four long-playing records. It is the first time Der Rosenkavalier, which Strauss called a "comedy for music," has been waxed on LP in its entirety—approximately three hours and eight minutes.

The way Urania went about its job, it was almost inevitable that its results would be brilliant. It got together some of the foremost singers and one of the best orchestras in Europe and a technical staff of unsurpassed skill.

Margarete Baumer, leading soprano of the Leipzig and Dresden Opera Companies, sings the Princess; Kurt Behme, basso buffo, sings Ochs—he is considered Europe's leading Ochs; Tiana Lemnitz, mezzo-soprano, sings Octavian, a role for which she is famous, and Ursula Richter, a young soprano of whom great things are predicted, sings Sophie.

The chorus of the Dresden State Opera and the Saxonian State Orchestra, conducted by Rudolph Kempe, give outstanding performances. (Some years ago the Saxonian was voted one of the world's five best orchestras.) It sound as if all participants were inspired, perhaps, by the fact that it was in Dresden that Der Rosenkavalier was first presented in 1911. The famous waltzes are beautifully done.

Though Der Rosenkavalier has been in these musicians' repertoire for years, many rehearsals preceded recording sessions. The taping required three days, and the technicians performed as ably as the musicians. The records are remarkably free of surface noise.

With many record companies going all-out to get operas on LP, Urania has undertaken an ambitious program. Besides Der Rosenkavalier, operas just released or soon to be released include Wagner's Tristan und Isolde, Die Meistersinger, The Ring, beginning with Gotterdammerung, Johann Strauss' Thousand and One Nights, Mussorgsky's Boris Goudonow, and Glucks' Orpheus and Euridice.

Whatever may be said of these other operas, it can be stated without qualification that this waxing of Der Rosenkavalier is a great contribution to recorded music.

Spanish Album Warm

The brilliant young Spanish soprano, Victoria de Los Angeles, sings Spanish folk songs with a warmth and fervor that must come from love of her homeland and familiarity with the music of Spain. Her voice has stature, richness and flexibility as shown clearly in "Spanish Folk Songs," an album of 11 compositions released by RCA Victor.

Miss de Los Angeles is accompanied by Renata Tarrago, guitarist.

The entire presentation is simple and authentic, qualities easily realized by the listener. The program notes by Robert Hague, are particularly interesting and valuable in the colloquial Spanish lyrics—difficult to understand even with a fair understanding of the language.

In another Spanish music album, Mezzo-soprano Conchita Supervia gives her rich voice to seven songs of Manuel de Falla and a seven-part song cycle of Granados for Decca. (DL7510).

The de Falla series consists of "El Pano Moruno," "Sequidillia Murchiana," "Asturiana," "Jota," "Nana," "Cancion" and "Polo." The Granados cycle, entitled "Tonadillas," includes "El Majo Discreto," "El tra-la-la-la y el punteado," "E Major Timido," "La Majo Dolorosa," "Amor y Odio," "Callejeo," and "Las Currutacas Modestras."

Sentimental Neapolitan

Movie-goers who recently saw "The Great Caruso," cinematic version of the life story of that best-known of all Neapolitan singers—and everybody who thrills to a good tenor singing a sentimental Italian song—shoud applaud a new RCA-Victor Red Seal album offering Ferruccio Tagliavini in "Neapolitan Folk Songs." (WDM-1525).

Metropolitan Opera star Tagliavini, a favorite of Atlantans who has appeared here during past opera seasons, is in excellent voice. He is lyrically tender, melancholy, and gay by turns in six songs reflecting the volatile Mediterranean temperament.

Tagliavini is especially pleasing in the familiar "Mattinata," a staple in the repertoires of most Italian tenors, and a Caruso favorite, "Mamma Mia Che VO' Sape."

General Tendencies — This may not look like a very exciting day but before you know it there will be opportunities here for advancement, new friends and social doings. This seems to be a turn in the tide, the beginning of an increase in both personal and financial interests which have been affected by the slow currents of the earlier part of this month. Probably the people born in July and February will feel this pleasant state of affairs more quickly than anyone else.

If It's Your Birthday — You have an interesting year ahead of you. First of all, your money affairs are due to improve greatly, but business and income will need careful attention and plenty of hard work at all times because this progress is not due primarily to luck but is the result of your own efforts. You will find many extremes of fortune here but the general outcome will be favorable. Love affairs will surprise you but probably in a pleasant manner.

Parolee, 14, Admits Killing Granddad

OSWEGO, Kan., May 27—(AP)—A 14-year-old boy recently released from an orphanage psychiatric ward admitted Sunday he fatally shot his grandfather.

Sheriff John E. Burris said the youth, Norman Duncan, signed a statement saying he pumped six bullets into George H. Schuttler, 69, last Wednesday.

The body, wrapped in blankets and newspapers, was found Saturday in the elderly man's farm home near here.

The boy had been confined in the psychiatric ward of the Kansas State Orphanage at Atchison following his conviction on a charge of burglary. He was paroled to his grandfather last Jan. 27.

TELEVISION-RADIO

Guests to Emcee 'Strictly for Girls'

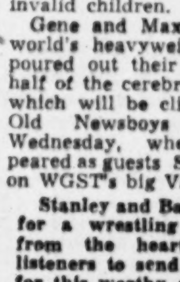

By PAUL JONES

Strictly for the Girls—WSB-TV's unpredictable hen party—is going in for "strictly laughs" during the next two weeks.

Lee Jordan, who teams with Bob Van Camp on the matinee gagfest, has left on a 14-day vacation in New York and WSB-TV has chosen to give its large staff of radio announcers and television personalities a chance to pinch hit.

A number of surprises will be in store for the distaff viewers as WSB-TV parades a lineup of glamour boys before the cameras. The results should be hilarious.

Roy McMillan, who started in radio with the crystal set and who has only a passing acquaintance with a teevee set — it is rumored he has one in his home — will top the guest personalities. Roy's appearance, probably next Thursday, promises to be one of the show's high spots.

Roy McMillan

Ivy Peterson, WSB-TV floor manager who reads the funnies on the Woody Willow show; Don Elliott, newscaster of teevee and radio; Jim Murray, Bill Hale and Bill Brittain, Thad Horton, sports caster; Bob Watson, the ace disc jockey; Jimmy Bridges, teevee news caster, and others will take up where Lee left off, sharing the emcee honors with Van Camp.

Incidentally, Strictly for the Girls will go on teevee at 1:15 p. m. starting Monday.

Mr. America, Gene Stanley, has a reputation for being one of the toughest customers in teevee mat circles. But he also has a heart as big as the next guy when the chips are down for invalid children.

Gene and Max Baer, former world's heavyweight champion, poured out their hearts in behalf of the cerebral palsy drive, which will be climaxed by the Old Newsboys paper sale Wednesday, when they appeared as guests Saturday night on WGST's big Variety Show.

Stanley and Baer, in Atlanta for a wrestling card, spoke from the heart in asking listeners to send in donations for this worthy cause. As the big Baer left the studio tears were streaming down his face.

Zenas Sears, WGST announcer, did a grand job on the four-hour extravaganza which saw almost every radio disc jockey and almost every personality in show business here step up to the mike to appeal for the crippled youngsters. Their appeal netted more than $1,000 in small contributions of from $1 to $5. Danny Demetry, Club 26 owner, tossed in a donation of $100.

SPEAKING OF WRESTLERS, Baron Leone, the man with the flowing black tresses, tangles with Leo Garibaldi in the main event on the mat-mayhem from Hollywood at 9—WSB-TV. In a preliminary match Enrique Torres and Tony Martinez will tangle with Mr. Moto and Krippler Karl Davis.

Basil Rathbone stars in Lights Out production of "Dead Man's Coat," story of an abused personal servant who is forced to accompany his master to the graveyard late at night. The show's on WSB-TV at 8:30.

Sarah Churchill, actress daughter of Winston Churchill, costars with Jeffrey Lynn in John Whedon's "Sweet Sorrow" on Lux Video Theater at 7—WAGA-TV. . . . Vivienne Segal, noted Broadway actress, makes her debut in video at 9—WAGA-TV—when she stars in Studio One's "Here Is My Life."

Break the Bank at 10:30—WSB-TV—will offer a tidy $8,120 when Bert Parks fires questions. . . . John Cameron Swayze takes viewers on a make-believe trip to capitals of the world via the magic of the movie camera during the 6:45 p. m. newscast on WSB-TV. . . . Nat (King) Cole and his trio will sing "Too Young" when they visit Perry Como at 6:45—WAGA-TV. . . . Carol Bruce, singing star, will be Earl Wrightson's guest at 10—WAGA-TV. . . . Two stars of Ice Capades, the radio cast of the Johnson Family, a Chinese orchestra and the floating lady illusion of magic, will be featured on Art Baker's You Asked for It at 8:30—WAGA-TV.

RADIOWISE—Sen. Estes Kefauver will speak on "The Atlantic Union Plan" at 11:30—WAGA-CBS. . . . John Lund portrays a retiring pawn broker who becomes involved with a sweenstakes ticket holder in "They Call Me Lucky" on WAGA-CBS at 8.

Jean Graham, young American pianist, will be soloist with the Boston Pops at 10—WSB-NBC. . . . She will play "Concerto in D-Flat" by Prokofiev. . . . Annamary Dickey will join Gordon MacRae in Friml's "Katinka" on the Railroad Hour at 8—WSB-NBC. . . . Eleanor Steber, soprano, sings on the Voice of Firestone at 8:30 on WSB-radio and at 8:30 on WSB-TV. She'll sing "Lovelier Than Ever," "Ernani, Involami" and "The World Is Mine Tonight." . . . Blanche Thebom, mezzo-soprano, will be featured on the Telephone Hour at 9—WSB-NBC.

Gregory Peck, Ruth Roman and Virginia Mayo star in a Lux Radio adaptation of "Bright Leaf" at 9—WAGA-CBS.

Field Marshal Blamey Dies; Australian Hero of 2 Wars

SYDNEY, Australia, May 27—(AP)—Field Marshall Sir Thomas Blamey, mastermind of Australia's toughest military campaigns in two world wars, died Sunday in Heidelberg Military Hospital after nearly a year of illness. He was 67.

During World War II, Blamey was Commander in Chief of Allied land forces under Gen. MacArthur and gained much of the credit for stopping the Japanese armies at the very doorstep of Australia.

Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies announced in Canberra that the late field marshal will be buried with full military honors in a state funeral Wednesday afternoon.

Marshal Blamey

"He was a magnificent soldier," Menzies said, "and a devoted servant to his people. A man in whom patriotism, great ability, strength of mind and force of character were blended in most massive proportions."

Blamey was the first Australian ever to be elevated to the rank of field marshal. This promotion came last year on the King's birthday, just after Blamey became seriously ill with pneumonia. He received the honor in a wheel chair, wearing his beribboned battle tunic, his blanketed legs clad in pajama trousers.

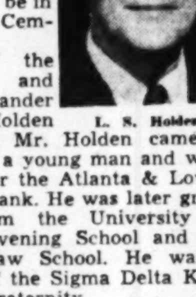

Born Thomas Albert Blamey in New South Wales, the field marshal gave up ideas of becoming a schoolteacher and received a commission as lieutenant in 1906. He became a brigadier in World War I at the age of 34, and served as chief of staff to Gen. Sir John Monash during the Allied victory push in 1918. He was knighted in 1935.

At the outbreak of the last war, Blamey was the first soldier to enlist in the Australian Imperial Force. He became deputy commander-in-chief of Allied forces in the Middle East under Field Marshal Earl Wavell after commanding Australian and New Zealand forces in the unsuccessful stand against the Germans in Greece.

When Japan struck in the Pacific and threatened to overrun Australia, he brought his tough Australian "Desert Rats" back to fight the enemy in New Guinea. He became commander-in-chief of the Australian Army. His troops bore the burden of clearing from island jungles in the Pacific the hordes of Japanese soldiers who had been by-passed in the victorious Allied island-hopping campaign.

Yes—American Kitchens is the easiest kitchen to clean—smooth easy-to-wipe surfaces with concealed door and drawer pulls to eliminate dirt-catching handles . . . rounded drawer interiors—seamless—clean easily as wiping out a bowl.
